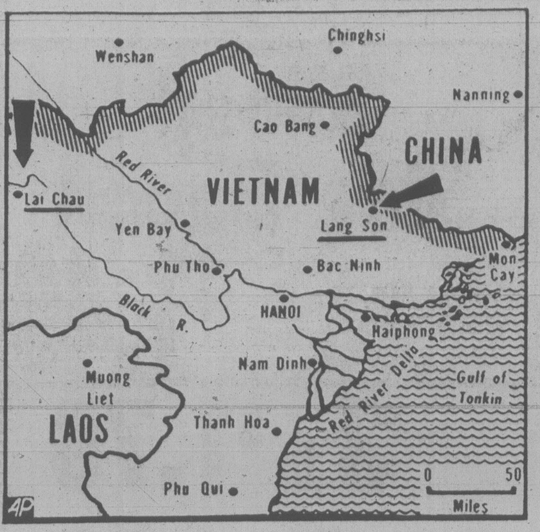
Vietnam Invaded by China



Times News Services

BANGKOK — Chinese forces backed by tanks, fighter planes and artillery invaded Vietnam along the 500-mile length of the two nations' border today.

The official New China News Agency reported that the past week of sporadic border clashes had escalated to a "grave armed conflict," but it said Hanoi was to blame.

It promised China's troops would withdraw "after counterattacking the Vietnamese aggressors as they deserve."

In Washington, the U.S. State Department announced it had asked China to withdraw its troops from Vietnam immediately and said it has opened contacts with Peking, Moscow and Hanoi in an effort to achieve that goal and urge restraint.

In its first official reaction, the State Department carefully balanced its criticism of China with a call for Vietnam to withdraw its own forces from Cambodia.

Reports from Hanoi and Peking indicated battles raged between the two Communist states, once staunchly allied together against the United States, at more than a dozen points. The Soviet news agency Tass reported details of the battles from Hanoi without comment.

Radio Hanoi said the Chinese invaded four northern provinces of Vietnam and that "the Vietnamese troops fought back and killed at least 250 Chinese troops, according to a preliminary survey."

But dispatches by Communist reporters based in Hanoi admitted the advancing Chinese armies had captured a number of border villages, and said they had penetrated up to 10 kilometres inside Vietnamese territory.

The Hanoi broadcast said at least eight Vietnamese tanks had been destroyed.

U.S. state department spokesman Hodding Carter told reporters: "We are opposed both to the Vietnamese invasion of Cambodia and the Chinese invasion of Vietnam. We call for the immediate withdrawal of Vietnamese troops from Cambodia and Chinese troops from Vietnam.

"We have been in contact with the Chinese, the Vietnamese and the Soviet Union urging and counselling restraint. We will continue to do so."

Asked why the United States felt it had to get in touch with the Soviets on this issue, the spokesman replied, in what sounded like a note of caution to the Kremlin:

"Simply because of our desire to counsel those who may otherwise feel that they have a role or stake in the region, that any steps which would extend the conflict would have serious consequences not only for the region but for a larger sense of peace generally.

Western intelligence analysts said the invasion was a Chinese retaliation for Vietnam's leadership of the forces that ousted the Pol Pot regime in Cambodia last month, as well as for long-standing mistreatment of ethnic Chinese in Vietnam.

Vietnam said its government was appealing to the UN Security Council to convene an urgent meeting to halt the invasion.

The Vietnamese military radio reported the population of four Vietnamese provinces under attack was fiercely resisting the Chinese advance. The broadcast charged Peking's troops were "using long-range artillery to wantonly shell several towns and cities and populated areas."

Japan's Kyodo news service quoted Peking sources as saying a directive by the Communist Party leadership announcing the decision for military action was approved by all members of the standing committee of the National Peoples' Congress.

In a dispatch from Bangkok, Kyodo quoted a Thai military source as saying Vietnam has about 100,000 troops on the Chinese border while China has concentrated 200,000 men and 700 warplanes along the frontier.

Vietnam and China have been involved in escalating border skirmishes for the past year. The fighting started in response to Chinese claims that ethnic Chinese were being mistreated in Vietnam.

The Chinese claim that the Soviet Union, through the Vietnamese, want to exercise control over all of Indochina.

An executive member of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union today blasted a tentative U.S.-Canadian West Coast fish agreement.

Scotty Neish charged the U.S. is treating Canadians like "drawers of water and hewers of wood".

"And the Canadian government is allowing them to treat us this way," said Neish, one of the union's most outspoken members.

His angry comments were made after it was announced Canadian and American negotiators had reached a tentative agreement Friday in Juneau on two key points for a West Coast fishing treaty.

"The way the Canadian government is going about this we are going to be the losers," Neish said.

"Just watch the pressure from the U.S."

Under the pact, Canadians would be phased out of halibut fishing in U.S. waters over a two-year period.

In exchange, U.S. fishermen would gradually be phased out of B.C. groundfish stocks.

Neish said the Canadian government is negotiating the west coast fishing treaty piecemeal, leaving the most important issue — the salmon fishery — to the last.

"The government is going along with the U.S. in taking a continental approach to the management of the west coast fisheries instead of insisting on Canadian fishing rights," he said.

"It is dealing with the fisheries piecemeal and when we come to deal with the salmon and fisheries boundaries we wont have anything to bargain with.

"Why shouldn't we have the right to fish halibut in the Bering sea when they (the Americans) claim rights to Fraser River salmon?" said Neish.

Neish said a few years ago the government permitted U.S. fishermen to fish for shrimp just off the coast of Vancouver island.

Now the Americans insist they have the historical rights to fish there.

He predicted that when the salmon fisheries and boundary question comes up for discussion, it will be referred to arbitration.

"Canadians have never won before an arbitration board," he said.

"It is time we stuck up for our rights".

John Negroponte, chief U.S. fishing negotiator, said details on the agreement could not yet be released.

Negroponte said negotiators will now take the tentative agreement back to Washington and Ottawa.

West Coast maritime boundary and salmon fishing disputes remain unresolved, but Negroponte said he is hoping for a settlement on salmon later this year.

Negroponte said Friday's agreement would phase Canadian halibut fishermen out of U.S. waters by 1981.

Canadians would be allowed to catch two million pounds of halibut this year, and one million pounds in 1980. Canadians have caught an average of four million pounds of halibut in U.S. waters in recent years, Negroponte said.

He said negotiators also agreed to the continuation of the International Pacific Halibut Commission.

Now it's Saturday and Mrs. Savage is still waiting. The snow and ice have stranded her husband and three friends in the pub.

"At first the wife just would not believe me," Savage told reporters by telephone.

The men tried to leave Tuesday night, and drove two miles before getting stuck.

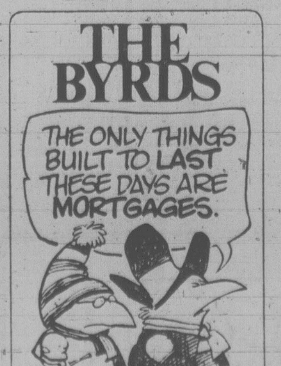
Grits Study Tax Lure For Renters, Owners

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is considering a shelter tax credit for both renters and homeowners to offset the Progressive Conservative election promise of tax deductions for mortgage payments, government sources said Friday.



THE BYRDS
THE ONLY THINGS BUILT TO LAST THESE DAYS ARE MORTGAGES.

The sources said the idea would be unveiled Monday by Andre Ouellet, minister of urban affairs, in a speech at the annual meeting of the Housing and Urban Development Association of Canada (HUDAC).

The plan, in the works for several months, could form an important plank in a spring election platform, the sources said.

Although the Liberals — including Prime Minister Trudeau, and Finance Minister Jean Chretien — have strongly attacked the mortgage interest plan of the Conservatives, Liberal strategists think it has tremendous popularity.

The Liberals have said the plan unveiled by Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark last fall would cost billions in lost tax revenue, would benefit most those with the highest incomes and would not give any benefits to renters.

"Clark's fatal flaw is that he hasn't offered anything to renters," said a government source.

The Liberal tax credit plan would offer something to renters and it would also provide the biggest benefit for those with the lowest incomes. As incomes rose, the amount of the tax credit would be less.

The Clark proposal, on the other hand, would offer the biggest benefit to those with the highest income and with the highest mortages.

Clark has promised to bring in over a four-year period a plan to allow up to $5,000 in annual interest for a first mortgage on a principal residence to be deducted from income tax as well as up to $1,000 in municipal taxes.

Rum-Runners and Gurus Welcome in His Kingdom

EDMONTON (CP) — The pie-shaped kingdom sits on the Alberta-British Columbia border about 65 kilometres north of the United States.

It was discovered about a decade ago by Ian Turner, 45, the city clerk of Cranbrook. A student of local history, he came upon evidence that a creek marking the provincial boundary had once flowed into both Alberta and British Columbia. The B.C. fork had later been diverted.

"By cutting off the one in B.C., the boundary was shifted over, when it should have been decided by the height of land," Turner explains.

So he claimed the land as his own in the name of Wisukitsak, "king by the grace of God."

The craggy principality, overlooking the 1,400-metre-high Crowsnest Pass, measures five kilometres by half a kilometre. His name for it is Loges des Corbeaux — which is his French translation for Crowsnest.

Turner approached the federal government and both the provincial governments with his claim.

"Victoria was interested, Ottawa mildly interested and Edmonton didn't want to talk to me."

Turner says his royal name — Wisukitsak — means "Old Man" in Cree.

Turner has drawn up a coat of arms for his principality and registered it with the copyright office in Ottawa.

The crest occupies a place of honor in the "king's rumpus room." It consists of a purple crow and purple fleur-de-lis, all on a gold background. In the world of heraldry, the crest symbolizes bastardy.

Turner confesses his wife "thinks I'm out of my tree."

In his own mind, the king visualizes Loges des Corbeaux as a refuge for freedom.

"When the new boundaries are set, there'll be no income tax, no liquor tax and citizenship will be open to anyone of a kindred spirit," Turner says.

"Rum-runners, remittance men and gurus are all welcome here."

Turner's historical research indicates Loges des Corbeaux would be true to the tradition of the area.

The first large population arrived with the railway in 1896. Andy Good set up a drinking establishment for the rum-runners, prostitutes and tough railway navvies.

Good's first emporium was a tent with slab sides and a wooden dance floor. It was followed by the Crowsnest Pass Hotel, an establishment with a mountain lion, a bear and wolves in a back room, mean whisky out

Storms Won't Let Go

PARIS (Reuter) — A blast of Arctic weather brought near paralysis to much of Europe on Friday for the third successive day and authorities blamed the cold snap for at least 58 deaths.

In France, heavy snow cut off highways as far south as Marseilles, where traffic was backed up for more than 21 kilometres north of the city.

Troops in the Netherlands battled to clear blocked roads, bridges and dykes after a 36-hour blizzard which brought the country to a virtual standstill.

In Sweden, the main highways reopened but cars travelled in convoys behind snowplows escorted by police. In Denmark, traffic authorities estimated that 8,000 cars had been abandoned because of drifting snow.

In Britain, suffering its worst winter in 15 years, three railway men were killed Thursday night in two separate accidents as they cleared snow from blocked tracks in northern England.

Several people froze to death across West Germany.

Moscow Radio reported that the Soviet Far Eastern port of Vanino was blocked by ice pushed in by strong northeast winds and even the icebreaker Leningrad could not get through.

In Portugal, recovering from the worst flooding in a century, repair work began Friday on Lisbon's water pumping stations but domestic supplies are not expected to return to normal until early next week.

Brighter weather was forecast after two weeks of storms which forced 10,000 people from their homes and caused heavy damage to crops, communications and port and oil installations.

Violent rainstorms in Spain have caused at least two deaths this week.

In Altentrepton, East Germany a boy was born in an army helicopter Friday as the mother was being flown to a hospital. Heavy snowfalls blocked the roads.

The official ADN news agency said the mother and baby are doing well.

Arts to Get Share of Loto

OTTAWA (CP) — Sports Minister Iona Campagnola unveiled plans Friday to split at least $48 million of annual national lottery profits between amateur sports and cultural programs.

A bill introduced in the Commons would allow the government to spend the remainder of the anticipated $80 million-a-year profits from Loto Canada on research into sports and culture plus other unspecified "worthwhile projects."

But Mrs. Campagnolo admitted in an interview that she is not optimistic that the bill will become law before Parliament is dissolved for an election.

The bill would replace the current distribution arrangement for Loto Canada profits, which expires at the end of this year.

The bill would vastly increase the amount of federal lottery money available for sports, fitness and recreation. Since it came into being in 1976, Loto Canada has raised $8 million for these programs, administered through Mrs. Campagnolo's office.

It would be the first time Loto Canada money would be used for arts and cultural activities. This part of the program would be administered through State Secretary John Roberts' department.

Mrs. Campagnolo and Roberts discussed details of the new distribution arrangement at a news conference, minutes after the federal lottery came under attack in the Commons.

In response to questions from Conservative MP Ray Hnatyshyn, Consumer Affairs Minister Warren Allmand said his department is investigating possible misleading advertising by provincial lotteries and Loto Canada.

Hnatyshyn (Saskatoon-Biggar) asked Allmand to make sure lottery ticket purchasers are not being "ripped off."

Mrs. Campagnolo rejected criticism by the Consumers Association of Canada, which said government lotteries exploit the gullible, instead of protecting them.

With another low pressure centre and frontal system moving onto Vancouver Island the outer coasts are again being lashed by rain and high winds. The frontal system will cross the coast today spreading snow to most interior regions through the day. The centre of low pressure will remain off shore and continue to pump moist Pacific air over the province resulting in mainly cloudy skies and showers or snow flurries inland through the weekend. However some areas in favored orographic locations will see some sunny breaks following the passage of the frontal system.

Farris Permitted Back as Lawyer

VANCOUVER — John Farris, who resigned last Dec. 31 as chief justice of the British Columbia Supreme Court after a police investigation linked him with a prostitute, will resume practice as a lawyer. Farris, 67, confirmed Thursday that his application to be readmitted to the bar had been approved by the B.C. Law Society. He said, however, that the society's rules prevent him from appearing in court.

LONDON — Prince Charles has announced the first expedition around the world by way of the North and South Poles and called it a "mad and suitably British" idea. Sir Ranulph Twisleton-Wykeham-Fiennes is leading the team of five men and one woman on the three-year trip by boat, Jeep and powered sled, Charles said. "Nobody has ever been around the world on its axis, somebody has got to do it first and there is a chance it might be us," he said. Charles said the team would be following traditions of British Antarctic explorers Sir Ernest Shackleton and Captain Robert Scott. The team goes through Europe, western Sahara, southern Atlantic and South Pole, then through Auckland, Sydney, Fiji, Los Angeles and Vancouver up to the North Pole.

CAPE TOWN — Dr. Christiaan Barnard implanted a "piggy-back" heart in the chest of an American today in a five-hour operation at Cape Town's Grooteschur Hospital, a hospital spokesman said. Rick Anderson, 26, was reported "doing fine" after Barnard and his surgical team implanted a second heart beside his diseased organ. Anderson was told by U.S. doctors more than a year ago that he had only 18 months to live. Friends in Smithville raised $30,000 for Anderson and his wife Cathy to go to South Africa for the operation.

MANAMA, Bahrain — Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip were guests at a regal outing in this desert sheikdom, watching the two ancient kingly sports of horse racing and falconry. They were the guests Friday of Sheik Isa Bin Salman al Khalifa, ruler of Bahrain. Thousands of spectators packed the track, but all went home neither richer nor poorer, since betting is illegal.

LOS ANGELES — A three-year-old boy died 18 minutes after life support equipment was disconnected when a judge ruled the courts should "allow nature to take its course." The boy's parents requested Friday's action after he spent three months in a coma and had been described as "dead in all human senses," the victim of major brain damage suffered in a November auto accident. The parents, who were not identified, sought the ruling by Juvenile Court Judge Richard Byrne when doctors refused to honor their request to disconnect the boy's artificial respirator and to cease tube-feeding nutrients to him.

OTTAWA — Bill Hopper has been appointed chairman and chief executive officer of Petro Canada, the national oil company, Prime Minister Trudeau's office announced Friday. He takes over the chairman's job previously held by Maurice Strong who resigned last year and became a Liberal candidate.

BROCKVILLE, Ont. — Tom Cossitt, Progressive Conservative MP for Leeds, and his wife, Johanna, said today they have agreed to withdraw assault charges against each other. They said they have reached a settlement of property matters in their pending divorce proceedings.

Housing Market Slumps

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. housing market is reeling under a triple blow of soaring costs, rising interest rates and inflation, government figures show.

The three combined to push new housing construction to its lowest level in two years last month, the U.S. commerce department reported Friday.

It said housing starts in January declined to an annual rate of 1,656,000 units, down 20 per cent from the December rate of 2,062,000.

Commerce department figures show that the price of an average new house rose to $61,000 in December from $58,799 last November. In December, 1977, the median sale price was $52,700.

Despite rising mortgage interest rates, housing construction averaged about two million units in each of the last two years.

Cargo Jet, F-100 Hit

TAIPEI (AP) — A Taiwanese jet fighter sheared off part of the tail of a civilian cargo jet in a midair collision over Taiwan today. There were no casualties.

The sources said the pilot of Trans-Mediterranean Airways flight 343 brought the crippled Boeing-707 down safely at Taipei's international airport after colliding with an F-100 fighter. The fighter pilot bailed out.

Iran Oil Workers Heed End-to-Strike Appeal

TEHRAN (CP) — Almost all of Iran's vital oil workers heeded an appeal by religious leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and reported back to work today after a strike of nearly four months, oil industry sources said.

Tehran Radio reported a widespread return to work in the oilfields and also said Gen. Iraj Moghaden, a former energy minister, had committed suicide.

There were also unconfirmed reports that Prince Shahriyar, son of the shah's twin sister Princess Ashraf, was arrested and handed over to Khomeini's revolutionary committee. The prince, who commanded hovercraft forces in the Persian Gulf, was said to have been seized while trying to flee the country in a boat.

Meanwhile, with the safety of foreigners still in question, about 1,500 — mostly Americans and Britons — waited at Tehran's Mehrabad Airport for special evacuation flights. Thirty Canadians were also scheduled to leave the country today, leaving 80 Canadians in Iran.

The ayatollah's call for a return to normal on the first working day of the Moslem week was seen as a major test of the government of Mehdi Bazargan, who assumed office a week ago when the shah's prime minister, Shahpur Bakhtiar, resigned.

Industry sources said almost all the 30,000 persons employed in oilfields, refineries, petrochemical and natural gas plants reported to work.

But the sources said there will be no oil for export yet and only about 700,000 barrels a day needed domestically will be produced for the time being.

Many shops, offices and other businesses reopened today as the capital appeared to return to normal after months of bloodshed and riots against the shah's rule.

There was no immediate indication of how many soldiers and police had obeyed the ayatollah's orders to return to barracks.

Some troops, believed to be mostly leftists, have vowed not to return until the authorities establish a "people's revolutionary army."

Military authorities announced the disbandment of the shah's royal guards and the Immortal Brigade, the only units to resist the revolutionary onslaught last weekend in Tehran in which the army high command remained neutral.

About 800 Americans flew out of Tehran airport aboard two jumbo jets today as the U.S. government launched a four-day operation designed to get up to 5,000 U.S. citizens out Iran.

The two jumbo jets are bound for Rome and Frankfurt, West Germany.

On Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, three jumbos a day will fly out more Americans. In addition, an Air Force C-141 transport landed in Tehran today to aid in the evacuation.

Some 2,000 Americans will remain in Iran.

Border War Heating Up

DAR ES SALAAM (CP) — Tanzania on Friday reported heavy border fighting with Ugandan forces for the second consecutive day and said two Ugandan combat planes were shot down after they dropped bombs near a town inside Tanzania.

A government statement said the planes were brought down by ground fire Friday morning after they dropped bombs in the area of Bukoba, 40 kilometres from the border on the western shore of Lake Victoria.

No Tanzanians were injured in the bombing, the statement said.

It said Tanzanian forces also destroyed two trucks loaded with Ugandan troops near the village of Mutukula, which straddles the Tanzania-Uganda border.

Tanzania said Thursday that Ugandan forces were being beaten back and suffered "heavy losses."

A statement said one Ugandan MiG-21 fighter bomber aircraft was shot down and Tanzanian forces captured a Soviet-built T-55 tank, four armored personnel carriers and two armed cars.

Two weeks ago Tanzanian President Julius Nyerere warned that Ugandan President Idi Amin was preparing an invasion of Tanzania as he did last October.

Amin claims 1,942 square kilometres of Tanzanian territory north of the Kagera River.

In a speech two weeks ago, Nyerere disclosed that he had authorized his military commanders on the border to order their troops into Uganda if need be to prevent another invasion.

Tanzanian officials said Friday activities of Tanzanian forces would be restricted to the border area.

Meanwhile, Radio Uganda, in a roadcast monitored in Johannesburg, South Africa, said Tanzanian troops have struck within 85 kilometres of the Ugandan capital of Kampala and Ugandan forces may have to resort to hand-to-hand fighting.

The radio said Ugandan forces had suffered heavy losses but did not elaborate.

Amin sent a letter to the United Nations asking Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim to discuss the continuing border violence between the two countries. Waldheim announced in New York on Thursday that he has sent a letter to Amin asking if he wants the Security Council to meet formally and discuss the situation.

Foreign reporters have been barred from the war zone and independent confirmation of the various claims was unavailable.

Amin has also appealed to Pope John Paul II to use his influence to end the war between his country and Tanzania, Radio Kampala said.

The appeal was made during a meeting with James Cardinal Robert Knox of Australia, who was in Uganda for celebrations marking the centenary of the Roman Catholic church there.

Not So Irresponsible

The howls of anguish from Oak Bay alderman and former school trustee Peter Bunn on the subject of the 1979 school board budget seem, to say the least, a little overdone.

To hear Bunn talk, you'd think that the new school board was at least giving every pupil in Greater Victoria schools a personal tutor and a classroom to himself. "Grossly irresponsible" was Bunn's term for a budget that is 6.9 per cent higher than last year's figure.

The budget item that seems to have inspired the harshest criticism was the decision to hire 11 more teachers than provided in the provisional budget set by the 1978 board before the political balance changed at the November elections. The impression seems to be about, from Bunn's statements and others, that the board is actually adding teachers despite a pattern of ever-declining enrolment that will see about 1,000 fewer pupils in district schools next year.

This is simply not the case. Although the new board has added the 11 positions to the provisional budget, Greater Victoria will still have 47 fewer teachers than last year. Without the budget change, there would have been 58 fewer teachers.

More generally, Bunn's main complaint seems to be that the school board budget is increasing at all while enrolment is decreasing. Lower enrolment should automatically mean lower costs, he appears to argue.

Regrettably, it isn't so simple. First, the board is automatically committed to pay an extra 7.6 per cent in salaries to its teachers as the result of an arbitration award.

Second, it will probably have to pay a similar increase to its non-teaching employees. Although these negotiations are continuing, the fact that school board employees are asking for a 17 per cent raise and the cost of living alone is expected to go up by 7.5 per cent next year means the board will be lucky to get away with any smaller award.

With those combined salaries taking up about 80 per cent of its budget, the board would have to chop staff and services drastically to freeze the budget.

The view that those chops should come easily and automatically because enrolment is dropping is a simplistic one. A decrease of 1,000 students seems a huge amount, but when those thousand students are divided among 12 grades and 53 schools, it isn't so easy to cut back without hurting the remaining students.

Further complicating the picture is the fact that enrolments in some schools are declining quite drastically, but in rapidly-growing suburban neighborhoods, more and more children are still crowding into the system.

No doubt every citizen of Greater Victoria would have made a few changes to the school board budget if he had a chance — a little more for this program, a little more for that.

On balance, however, it seems to us a reasonable and moderate effort to strike a balance between the needs of students and the taxpayers' ability to pay. It's probably less irresponsible than the comments Bunn is making.

Where to Draw the Line

Building inspectors should not accept cases of scotch from contractors. Forest service employees should not take presents from MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. People who work for the provincial purchasing commission ought not to accept "gifts" from its regular suppliers. And the B.C. registrar of travel agents should definitely avoid travelling courtesy of the travel business he oversees on the public's behalf.

For what happens all too frequently with government overseers and inspectors is that, even with the best of intentions, they expose themselves to the risk of identifying with the industries they are paid to monitor instead of with the public whose interests they are paid to protect.

No one suggests that B.C. travel agent registrar Alec Burden has been compromised by one week-long trip to Costa Rica, but his judgment in accepting a free flight and hotel accommodation along with a group of travel agents from Tripmakers International Ltd. of Vancouver is questionable.

He stated accurately that "this sort of thing" is an accepted practice in the travel industry. Airlines and hotels and the big packagers of all-inclusive vacations regularly offer free trips to travel agents as a means of advertising their attractions and letting the industry know what's available for the public. It is self-limiting. Any travel agent who recommends a substandard resort to his clients is not going to remain in business for long.

But Burden is no longer part of the travel industry. Previously, he was a sales manager for Wardair and ran a tour business in Alberta, which provided a good base of experience for his present position. In those roles there may be nothing out of the ordinary in accepting a freebie from a tour company.

But as registrar of travel agents for the government of B.C. there definitely is. Burden is not a travel agent; no longer is he putting tours together or selling charter flights. He determines who gets a travel agent's license in B.C. by investigating the applicant's financial worth and ability to fulfil promises to transport British Columbians to their fun-filled vacation spots.

Inspecting resorts in Costa Rica appears to be rather far off the track in this regard.

Perhaps the problem is not that Burden made the wrong choice but that he had a choice to make. It would seem a simple matter for the government to make a clear rule for its civil servants: gifts valued at more than $10 can not be accepted from companies or individuals who do business with the government.

Byelections Create Interest

QUEBEC — Two provincial byelections to be contested this spring are creating unusual political interest here.

In Argenteuil, Liberal leader Claude Ryan is a sure bet to win entry into the Quebec national assembly. But Ryan's campaign performance will be watched closely by those who still have doubts about his capacities in the political arena.

The other byelection, in the Quebec City riding of Jean Talon, is shaping up as a giant battle between two powerful backroom politicians who have decided to step into the foreground.

Jean Claude Rivest, a 36 year-old political whiz kid who was the top adviser to former Premier Robert Bourassa is seeking the nomination for the Liberals. He is a brilliant political strategist, but his reputation as the right hand man to the discredited Bourassa may hurt him in the campaign.

Makes Them Tremble

His Parti Quebecois opponent will be Louise Beaudoin, a tough and ambitious young woman who has been called the "eminence grise" behind Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Claude Morin. One Quebec politician has described her as "a power behind the throne who makes civil servant tremble."

The Jean Talon riding, was left vacant by the resignation of defeated Liberal leadership candidate Raymond Garneau. It has always been a Liberal stronghold but in 1976 the Liberals held it by less than 3,000 votes.

Premier Rene Levesque's erratic behavior during the recent visit of French premier Raymond Barre has politician and journalists buzzing.

Many observers feel Levesque was rude to plunge his guest into the middle of the Quebec-Ottawa quarrel. The premier's uncharacteristic behavior has sparked speculation about his health and the political strain he is under.

It all started at a state dinner when a giggling Levesque used the exchange of toasts to liken Prime Minister Trudeau to "Dr. Strangelove" and to rib his guest about Barre's "silence" on the issue of Quebec sovereignty.

Then there was the scene at a Montreal shopping complex when Levesque manoeuvred the French premier onto a balcony and tried to get him to repeat the famous "Vive le Quebec Libre" cry of late French president Charles de Gaulle.

. . . press speculates on his gaffes

And finally there was the chaotic scene at Mirabel airport during Barre's departure when the Quebec premier threw a tantrum at the presence of federal minister Marc Lalonde and a guard of honor. Television cameras caught Levesque with his arms folded during the national anthem.

But criticism of the premier's behavior has been confined to the English-language media and the provincial opposition parties have been reluctant to raise the issue in the house.

After actively courting public opinion in France and the United States for the last two years, the Parti Quebecois government's next target on the international horizon is Britain.

PQ strategists are planning a trip to London for the premier some time in April, althougha final decision will not be made until the end of the month.

When he gets there, Levesque may be in for a cool reception. British press coverage of the Parti Quebecois government has been critical — especially about the government's language legislation.

However, Levesque's gloebtrotting is designed as much for the press coverage back home as far the local impact it makes.

Roger Taillibert is back. The Paris architect who collected fees of $6.8 million for designing Montreal's $1 billion Olympic facilities will act as a consultant for the installation of the retractable roof on the Olympic stadium.

To Finish the Job

But Taillibert will be paid by a private contractor rather than by the government's Olympic Installations Board.

Ironically, news of Taillibert's collaboration on the roof project coincided with the revelation that part of his Paris soccer stadium on which the Olympic stadium was modelled collapsed in cold weather.

Meanwhile, Taillibert's recent visit to Montreal, during which he accompanied French Premier Barre on a tour of the Olympic stadium, is shrouded in mystery. It is not clear who invited him or whether he came on his own initiative.

The controversial architect left town just as a provincial inquiry into Olympic costs drew up a subpoena for him to testify.

Children Want to Help The Poor and Hungry

It's all too easy to become cynical in this business. Too much exposure to politicians calculating what will get them the most votes, too many stories of war, conflict and crime — it all combines to make it easy to forget much of the idealism that remains in the world, especially in the minds of children.

Occasionally, however, something happens to renew our faith. One of those "somethings" came this week in an envelope from Galiano Elementary School, a small three-room school on Galiano Island. It came in response to an editorial that appeared in the Times about 10 days ago, on the subject of the International Year of the Child.

The theme of the editorial was the need to consider the appalling plight of millions of children in Third World countries even as we work to improve the lot of Canadian children, already pretty decent by comparison. It tied in with some discussions the grade two, three, and four class had been having about the International Year of the Child.

The result was an envelope of 15 letters from seven, eight, and nine-year-old children, wondering what they might do to help. Just a few examples, exactly as written:

"We have been discussing International Year of the Child. We have been wondering exactly how to help the poor children in the world. Our school is a very small one so we couldn't send very much money. We think what you said was true. How can we help them? I'm in grade three in Mrs. Brinson's class. Yours truly, Alison Stafford."

"I am eight years old. I'm in grade three. I have brown hair. Our class has been talking about the International Year of the Child. My name is Adrienne Gould. Our school isn't very rich but still we would like to help the poor children. We would also like to know how we could help the poor children. Yours truly, Adrienne Gould."

"Our school has only three classes and something like seven grades, so you can imagine how we get along. In 1978 our school went on a walk-a-thon and made over $1,200 in money. Our class agrees what you put in the paper, and our teacher read the paper. Your freind, Tony Head."

"I am 10 years old. I have beigey-brown hair. I am in grade four. My name is Christine Connelly. Our class has been talking about International Year of the Child. We think what you said is true. We would like to know how we can help the poor children. We are not very rich. Yours sincerely, Christine.

y name is Michelle Laughlin. I am in grade four and nine years old. My class has been talking about the International Year of a Child. We think that what you said is true. We wondered if there is any way that we could help the poor children. Our school is very small so we can't send very much money. I am in Mrs. Brinson's class. Good luck. Yours truly, Michelle Laughlin."

And my own two personal favorites from among the letters:

"Our school is on Galiano Island. It is small and we do not have much money. My name is Carla Weatherell and my mother and I don't have much money too. But I will help if I can. I don't know what I can do. Your best friend, Carla Weatherell."

"I'd like to help the children of the poor. I have some clothes that are too small. How can I help? I'd like to help very much. Our school only small so we cannot give very much mony. From, Jeanne Mudie Esterbrook."

What happens to us as we grow up? How is it that the natural, intuitive compassion and understanding of those children disappeared, becomes, in so many of us, buried under layers of cynicism, "practicality" and "reality?"

But to help those children translate some of their compassion into practical terms, there are several organizations devoted to helping the poor of the Third World, especially the children. A few examples:

The Unitarian Service Committee, long a Times-supported charity, offers food, clothing, blankets and emergency aid to the destitute in the world's poorest countries. Its headquarters are at 56 Sparks Street, Ottawa, K1P 5B1, but it also has a Victoria chapter which runs a clothing depot and would welcome help.

UNICEF, the arm of the United Nations that deals especially with children, is playing a large role in International Year of the Child. Its provincial headquarters is at 739 West Hastings Street in Vancouver.

Foster Parents Plan of Canada offers most of its help through a plan in which an individual, school or association adopts a single destitute child and its family, providing personal contact through letters as well as financial support. If that seems too large a commitment, this organization also always accepts donations for an emergency fund. Its headquarters are at 153 St. Clair Avenue West, Toronto M4V 1P8.

Any of those organizations would, I am sure, be glad to offer suggestions as to how the children of Galiano School could help.

Good luck to them. They made my week. — B.McL.

Bunn's Years

With half-inch headlines on Feb. 14 (Trustees Draw Oak Bay Fire — Budget 'Grossly Irresponsible') you quoted former school trustee Peter Bunn as saying that a 6.8 per cent budget increase for the school board is "grossly irresponsible." Is this not rather extravagant language in view of the increases when the board was under his wing?

In 1973 when he was chairman the board's expenditures rose 14.5 per cent, with an enrolment drop of 895 pupils. In 1974 when he was again chairman, expenditures rose another 20.2 per cent for 834 fewer pupils. In the next two years they managed to spend 22.7 per cent and 20 per cent more, respectively, thereby building up a surplus in capital budgets and inventories. The last board was able to keep increases down by spending these surpluses or selling off, dirt cheap, their large inventories of school furniture and supplies and by cutting back on maintenance.

Now their nest eggs have nearly gone and there is a backlog of maintenance to be undertaken.

The present board is to be congratulated in keeping within a 6.8 per cent increase while having to pay salary and wage increases of over 7.6 per cent and still finding ways to improve the educational opportunities for students. The only thing that is grossly irresponsible is Mr. Bunn's outburst and your paper's tacit support of it. — Lavinia Greenwood, 687 Mount Joy Avenue.

IWA Shortsighted

By his action in siding with Tom Waterland in slamming the logging halt at Rennel Sound on the Queen Charlotte Islands (IWA Slams Logging Halt; Times, Feb. 6) Jack Munro has shown himself and the rest of the IWA brass to be as devoid of common sense or new ideas as the present government's department of lands and forests.

Mr. Waterland and Mr. Munro decry the use of the federal Fisheries Act but what else is there to do? Mr. Waterland refuses to hold public hearings on Rayonier's Moresby tree farm licence. He has promised tighter controls over logging operations in B.C. but we have heard all this nonsense when the TFLs were first granted. For years we have watched the destruction of salmon streams and the environment while being told that the forest companies and forests department were doing a good job of managing this resource.

Unless the forests department forces the logging companies to clean up their act there will be no choice but to apply the federal Fisheries Act more stringently, not just on the Charlottes, but elsewhere on the B.C. coast.

As for the IWA it is time for Jack Munro and his colleagues who lead this union to retire and let in some fresh blood with new ideas who won't be so inclined to let out lands and forests be destroyed for short term gains. — Dennis Peacock, 2-2440 Quadra Street.

Into the River

I have been trying to fill in my 1978 tax return. As a native of Ottawa and less than a year in Victoria I can now see why Ottawa and the present federal government there are ridiculed here. Some bright person decided not to put the total old age security pension for 1978 on line 09, as in other years. Instead they say attach copy 1 of T4A (O.A.S.) slip. As I have never received one, I looked up the 1978 tax guide. Page 11, Item 6 — pension income, in which they state the slip was mailed with the January cheques. If you have misplaced it a duplicate may be obtained by contacting the nearest office of health and welfare, Canada. I phoned the Victoria tax office, only to find out that the slips will be mailed with the February cheques, not January.

This is just another example of the brain trust and money savers in the federal government. Some genius probably decided not to print the amount on the tax return so that they could use the same forms year after year. I am thankful to say I was never a permanent federal employee but had a short period with them and know that there are enough forms, revisions, colors, etc. to suit someone's whims, that if they were ever dumped in the Ottawa River they would raise the level of the water to such an extent they would flood the country for miles around.

If anyone would like the information I have given here they can phone the district taxation office, Victoria 386-2176. — R. J. Ballantyne, 2161 Haultain Street.

'Arrogant Westerners Pretend a False Equality'

By JILL TWEEDIE
Manchester Guardian

The other day I listened while one man addressed another man, loudly, in a ragbag of words from other languages as disparate as Arabic and French. "Imshallah" he shouted. "Basta" he bellowed. "Pourquoi?" he yelled. When the other man departed, looking stunned, the first explained his strange behavior to me. "He was a foreigner, wasn't he? So I used foreign words."

Fool, I thought. Uncultured twit. People like me, I thought, understand these foreigners. We have never had any deep conviction that Britain is Best or even that West is Best. We have never gone about with the Union Jack pinned to any part of our anatomy, offensive or inoffensive. We know we live in a multi-racial society, if not a multi-racial planet, and we do not believe in our innate ethnic superiority. Lately, however, I have observed that many of us who appear wholeheartedly to accept our lack of superiority to foreign persons nevertheless act in so curiously inverted a way as to reveal to any inquiring mind that we do, in fact, feel so extraordinarily superior that we can well afford to pretend to a false equality.

Take the Queen, for example. She is, among other things, Her Britannic Majesty, Head of the Church of England and Head Englishwoman. Thus the qualities, beliefs, and customs these denote are enshrined in her and, whenever she travels to foreign parts, she goes as their epitome. This walking, talking advertisement for the British Way of Life is visiting the countries of Saudi Arabia and Oman, but do her advisers leave her to do her Islamic walkabouts in a nice summer frock of the kind considered entirely suitable for a royal procession down the high streets of any Surrey town? No. They require that the Royal Dressmakers and Milliners produce what you and I would call djellabahs and the other accoutrements of purdah — hats with veils to be wrapped about the Royal neck and face. The Queen, we are informed, must be covered from head to toe in accordance with Arab notions of decency.

Now it is possible that the Queen — like many of us — would look a whole lot better with all her fleshy parts concealed 'neath filmy veils. I quite fancy it myself. But I do not fancy one bit the raison d'etre of those veils — a dubious conglomeration of male religiosity, possessiveness, and the conviction of the inferiority of the female sex — and I see no earthly reason why our Britannic Queen should so swathe herself just to conform to a sartorial dogma that many Arab women are fighting to reject. When Arab Royalty visit Britain, it is perfectly obvious that not one of their protocol advisers have shoved the various Queens and Princesses into decollete frocks with bare arms and short hems and we do not expect the staff of Buckingham Palace to leap upon them and strip off their djellabahs and leather face-masks on the grounds that the Queen and her people would take offence at this cover-up.

Why not? Why is there no quid pro quo? Could it be that, deeply concealed beneath this courtesy, we consider ourselves more civilized, more able to bend to odd native customs than the inferior foreigners who visit us? Does not this behavior point up, however unconsciously, our inner conviction that we can do as the Romans, but the Romans, poor barbarians, cannot do as us? Are we not at all times aware, as we wander abroad in Abroad's garments, that under the djellabah or the sari or the shell necklace beats a true blue Protestant English heart that no amount of woggy goings-on are likely to corrupt?

Arabs, visiting our capital and our Queen, see no reason to alter their ideas upon female attire, among many other things. In the heart of intellectual and feminist Hampstead they build their women's quarters and conduct thereunto their veiled women, whereas our travel books are filled with advice as to the clothes necessary for Englishwomen to don before venturing into Islam or, for that matter, into Catholic Spain. All very tactful, I'm sure, but does not pure arrogance lie just a millimetre beneath the tact?

Another example of behavior that seems thinly to coneal the same arrogance: Dr. Jonathan Miller, a man second to none in our land for applied intelligence, liberal thinking and exquisite politeness, showed us recently — in The Body in Question — his view of the comparative virtues of black and white medicine. In a clearing in the jungle we came upon the good doctor, squatting. Squatting beside him was a distressed black lad whose face was swollen to elephantine proportions. After some diffident questioning of the black lad and some elaborate hand-waving, we were advised that Dr. Miller, personally, would diagnose the lad's ailment as an infection of the salivary glands and treat him with antibiotics.

But then he nose-dived into the "when in Rome" bit. It appeared that we must consult a local medicine man before such treatment could be applied. The medicine man grabbed a chick in his left toe, forced a noxious substance down its pathetic beak and we all solemnly watched the chick's death throes. When the chick was good and demised, we were informed that its passing away meant that Dr. Miller should not treat the swollen lad with antibiotics. Did Dr. Miller protest? Did he say "Go on, give us a chance"? He did not. He bowed his Westernly medical head and departed from off our screens, leaving, we presume, the distressed lad nursing his swollen head under a banyan tree to this day.

Now just between you and me, is this not ludicrous? Is it not arrogant? Is it not putting ten carts before a horse? There is no law that says it is necessary to jettison everything we do well in order to prove that foreigners are just as good as us. Any thinking person is quite aware that equality is a balancing act and not a straight slug-it-out point-for-point battle. If I bake a better cake than you but you bake better beans than me, we are not equal but actually useful to each other. I am sure that the Arabs and the Africans have strengths in their ways of life denied to us, but I do not, therefore, have to deny that we in the West have any strengths at all. Otherwise, co-operations between nations would make no sense at all because it would become debased into condescension. I will teach you and I will merely pretend that you are teaching me.

So we return to the Queen and Dr. Miller. In this country we no longer feel that the revealed flesh of women is a threat or blasphemy and if we practise this belief at home, then it follows that we think it right. Why dissemble in foreign parts? And though there may be all kinds of interesting hints and tips that we may gather from African medicine men, the treatment of infected salivary glands is not among them. So what, exactly, is the use of pretending and, therefore, leaving African people to die in the name of some vague etiquette?

We are not better than the Arabs in general but we are more advanced in female emancipation. We are not better than Africans in general but our Western pills are. Could we not simply settle for being equal in different ways?

Rainy Day Memories

STRAY FEATHERS
harold hosford

Rain! Cold, slanting, sleeting, rain. It beat against the window; made strange patterns on the glass; and had a grotesque, fluid effect on the images of the juncos I could see at the feeder outside.

It was a day to be indoors, a day for a book — a day for daydreaming. I was daydreaming.

For some unaccountable reason, my daydreaming was taking me back nearly 20 years, to the banks of the Rio Grande River, to the Santa Ana National Wildlife Refuge in southern Texas, and to a tiny, drab bird on the newly budding branch of an elm overhanging the brown, muddy waters of the river.

It was a dull, overcast, warm, and oppressively humid day. It was also a February day and in February, in southern Texas, spring is beginning to take a firm grip on the season. Her grip that day was most noticeable among the birds. Song — much of it unfamiliar to me — rang from every patch of brush.

Among the sounds I recognized were the gentle chuckles of a pair of Green Jays, resplendent in their violet and black and green livery as they nervously considered me — an obviously unfamiliar intruder into their private domain.

There was a Green Kingfisher, equally resplendent and flashing like an emerald, as he buzzed back and forth over the river, ticking excitedly over some difference of opinion with a Black Phoebe that hunted the same stretch of water.

There was a Kiskadee Flycatcher, a big, bold raucous fellow whose black-and-white striped head and sulphur yellow belly were only vaguely visible against the grey sky. His contribution to the sounds of the day were ki-deer, weer' ki-deer, weer — a noise that reminded me a lot of the familiar three-beers of our Olive-sided Flycatcher.

And there were delightful little flocks of Ground Doves almost invisible as they fed on the grey silt of former floods. No larger than a medium-sized sparrow, these little fellows have an unnerving habit of sitting close and exploding from underfoot just when you least expect it — their russet-colored wings identifying them once your heart adjusted to the task. The dove's gentle cooing was probably the most pervasive sound of the day.

But the bird that made the day most memorable was making no sound. I remember first seeing it as it flitted actively, deep in a tangled thicket near the water's edge. After considerable effort and patience, I managed to get a brief, clear look at the bird when it moved out on to a bare branch in search of insects.

At first I thought it was a kinglet. It was a pale dingy grey. Kinglets — even immatures — would be olive-green. It wasn't much bigger than a kinglet but had a longer tail. It acted a lot like a kinglet as it flitted silently through the branches — but it was no kinglet.

After a frustrating 20 minutes during which my trusty Peterson's Field Guide came in for a lot of attention, I was no closer to knowing what that little bird was than when I first saw it.

But, playing a hunch — and there's no explaining hunches — I began working on a tiny little chap that is closely related to our chickadees, the Verdin.

According to the book, if it was a Verdin, my bird should be showing some yellow on its face. It wasn't. Also, according to the book, it should have been showing two quite distinctive chestnut-brown patches, one at the bend of each folded wing. It wasn't. On the other hand, the book also said that juveniles were less strongly colored than adults and, sometimes, they didn't have these distinctive marks.

I took one more good look at my little bird and, as it flew off uttering a gentle tsee tsee, was left with nothing but the memory of a tiny, grey bird without any clear field marks.

To this day that memory haunts me. Was I looking at the one and only Verdin I ever saw?

Thanks to a rainy day, I can still recall that bird with almost as much anticipation, but no more satisfaction, now than then.

A Threat to Free Discussion

THE GLOBE AND MAIL
An Editorial

Technicalities, technicalities, technicalities. The law abounds with them. Let them, and they will blot out reason, obscure principles and provide refuge for the short-sighted — and that's just what has happened in a recent decision of the Supreme Court of Canada.

The principle at stake is the necessity for freedom of democratic dialogue. The issue is libel. The subject is letters to the editor.

Subjective Test

The Supreme Court held that it must be proved in court that either the letter writer or the editor must honestly believe the opinions expressed in a letter to the editor if a newspaper is to defend itself from libel charges on the grounds of fair comment. The crux of the decision is that courts must apply a subjective test: the belief of either editor or writer. But that was only the judgment of a majority of the Supreme Court judges. The dissenting minority of three (R. G. Brian Dickson, Wishart Spence and Willard Estey) said the test should be objective, and Judge Dickson, who wrote the minority opinion, quoted the standard that should be applied; "Could a fair-minded man, holding a strong view, holding perhaps a prejudiced view, have been capable of writing this? That is a totally different question from the question: Do you agree with what he said."

Those who defend the Supreme Court judgment try to say that it will not have great impact on the freedom of expression in Canada because the real reason why the Saskatoon Star Phoenix was convicted of libel was that the letter writers had left the province and could not be called to testify whether they really believed the opinions they wrote in their letter to the editor. None of the paper's editors agreed with the opinions expressed, so the Star Phoenix failed to satisfy the subjective test. How often will it happen that letter writers cannot be subpoenaed?

It is a short-sighted response. The real question is how will the decision affect editors in choosing letters for publication. The editors will know that all it will take will be one controversial letter where the letter writer has moved away to put the paper in trouble. And since a case may not get to trial for a year or two, the prospect of letter writers leaving the province are not at all remote.

And what is a controversial letter in this context? It is a letter where "the words tend to lower the complainant in the estimation of right-thinking members of society generally" — what the law calls a defamatory statement. As Judge Dickson points out, a "great deal of what is printed in letters to the editor columns" is defamatory. However, a defamatory statement is not libellous if it is fair comment and it is the Supreme Court's subjective test that now will determine what is and what is not fair comment.

Leave It Out

The result is that under the Supreme Court decision editors will have no assurance that they will be able to defend libel actions on controversial letters — and the old newspaper adage is, when in doubt, leave it out. What does that do to freedom of expression? The majority of the court did not ask.

Judge Dickson asked. And he said, "If editors are faced with the choice of publishing only those letters which espouse their own particular ideology, or being without defence if sued for defamation, democratic dialogue will be stifled. Healthy debate will likely be replaced by monotonous repetition of majoritarian ideas and conformity to accepted taste. In one-newspaper towns, of which there are many, competing ideas will no longer gain access. Readers will be exposed to a single political, economic and social point of view. In public controversy the tendency will be to suppress those letter with which the editor is not in agreement."

Too Important

Free access by the public to the platform offered by letters to the editor is far too important a democratic need to allow it to be cast aside by the Supreme Court. The attorney-general of each province should be looking to his Libel and Slander statutes and revising them to nullify the ruling.

CHESSMASTER

WHITE: 7
White to play and mate in two moves. Solution below.

YOUNG GIANT FROM THE EAST

Special to this paper by International Master John Peters.

The discovery of a new talent always excites chess fans around the world. Such a discovery is Gary Kasparov, a 13-year old candidate-master from Baku, Azerbaijan, who, in 1976, qualified for the Under-18 Championship of the USSR. What's more, he won the tournament, and represented his country in the World Youth Championship in Holland. He repeated his success in 1977, and gained the title of Master.

In the past year, Kasparov won a strong 18-player tournament in Minsk, ahead of two Grandmasters. His 9½-3½ score topped the 64-player all-master field. Kasparov's progress to date is well ahead of where Anatoly Karpov and Boris Spassky were at his age.

Normally cautious observers go wild in praise of him. Former World Champion Mikhael Botvinnik exclaimed, "The future of Soviet chess rests on Gary Kasparov's shoulders."

Here's a win by the 15-year old Soviet prodigy from the 1978 tournament in Minsk.

WORLD CHAMPIONS

The graph of the ages of chess world champions would show that, overall, it is falling — proving my contention that the chess world belongs to youth! Let's take a look at the ages of these champions, and how long they remained at the top:

Wilhelm Steinitz: 50-58. Dr. Emmanuel Lasker: 26-52. Jose Raoul Capablanca: 33-39. Dr. Alexander Alekhine: 35-54 (with two years interruption). Dr. Max Euwe: 34-36. Mikhael Botvinnik: 37-52 (with two interruptions). Vasily Smyslov: 36-37. Mikhael Tal: 23-24. Tigran Petrosian: 34-40. Boris Spassky: 32-35. Robert Fischer: 29-31. Anatoly Karpov: 23 . . .

Speaking of talented youngsters, recent tournament in Vilna, USSR, saw 16 of them in contest. All 16 are Russian Chess Masters!

Here is a game from this event:

The solution to the problem above is: 1. Q-N3, PxN; 2. Q-Q6 mate, or 1 . . . R-N6; 2. N-B6 mate; or 1 . . . K-R6; 2. NxBP mate, etc.

CJVI and Victoria are old friends. Since 1922, people have been turning us on. That was the year we started broadcasting, and soon we'll be celebrating our 57th birthday. We've grown and changed along with the city, and over the years we've become an integral part of the community . . . a service, a business, a friend.

To many of you, we're known simply as VI - a short, convenient handle - easy to say. Now its official. We're changing our look and shortening our name to VI•90. Our logo is in a new style and we've added the dogwood to it . . . our traditional symbol, the flower of our province.

You'll be seeing a lot more of us in our new style. It's comfortable, modern, and as with everything we do, it's in response to what we know our listeners want. Because as you've been listening to us, we've been listening to you.

Victoria Radio.
VI•90
People still turn us on.
More than ever.

Transit Formula 'Most Generous'

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm lashed out Friday at municipal officials over transit funding, but took it on the chin over legislation he plans to introduce at the next legislative session.

Vander Zalm rejected a demand by the Greater Vancouver Regional District for a guarantee that property taxes will not have to support mounting deficits for urban transportation.

The provincial government is to pay 75 per cent of deficits in the first year of the new Urban Transit Authority's operation with its share going down progressively to 60 per cent after five years.

The GVRD wanted that share to remain at 70 per cent.

"We are not going to change the financial formula," said Vander Zalm. "I don't mind them having more input, but the financial formula is the most generous in North America."

He said communities in the B.C. Interior are happy with the formula because they are already paying 50 per cent of deficits.

Meanwhile, Mayor Tom Constable of Burnaby critized Vander Zalm's announcement of new legislation designed to speed up zoning and development permit decisions by municipalities.

"I'm getting fed up with Willy," said Constable. "He should mind his own business.

"We should not allow developers to build whatever they want to build, regardless of the affect on the community involved. Municipalities must be in the driver's seat with development."

Avalanche Victims Identified

GOLDEN (CP) — RCMP released the names of five more avalanche victims Friday, leaving unidentified only one of the seven persons killed Wednesday afternoon on a remote mountain slope 30 kilometres from here.

Dead are: Walter Kalin, 40, of Einsiedeln, Switzerland; Hans Bolt, 36, of Krummenau, Switzerland; Ulrich Brugger, 28, of Velthim, Switzerland; Claude Schmidli, 50, of Basel, Switzerland; and Gunter Dietrich, 35, also of Basel.

RCMP had earlier released the name of Oskar Gertsch of Switzerland, brother of one of the three survivors of the skiing party.

The seventh victim was from the United States. His name was not released.

The 10 skiers were caught in an avalanche soon after beginning a run in the Purcell Mountains of southeastern British Columbia. They had been flown to the area by helicopter.

B.C. BYELECTIONS DATES NEXT WEEK

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett said Friday he will announce byelection dates next week to fill vacancies in the provincial ridings of North Vancouver-Seymour and North Vancouver-Capilano.

The North Vancouver-Seymour riding came open last September when former B.C. transport minister Jack Davis resigned his seat after being charged with fraud involving government funds. He was later convicted.

North Vancouver-Capilano came vacant in January when Liberal leader Gordon Gibson left provincial politics to take a job with the federal party.

There has been speculation that Bennett will call a full provincial election this year.

Coal Mine Conflict Denied

LETHBRIDGE (CP) — Techman Consulting Ltd. of Calgary, the consulting firm that did environmental studies into a major coal mining proposal near Elkford, B.C. has denied any link with Scurry Rainbow Oil Ltd., a shareholder in the proposed mine.

Bill Otway, executive director of the British Columbia Wildlife Federation, last month said Techman was a subsidiary of Loram Co., and Loram was a subsidiary of Scurry Rainbow.

Scurry Rainbow is a shareholder in the proposed $500 million project.

Techman officials Friday admitted being a subsidiary of Loram but said there's no connection with Scurry Rainbow. A search of ownership by The Lethbridge Herald, which released Otway's statement, substantiated the statement.

"Neither Scurry Rainbow Oil Ltd. or Elko Mining Co., or any of the associated companies has, or ever has had, any interest in Techman Ltd. or Loram Co. Ltd." a Techman statement said.

Otway had suggested there was a conflict of interest in Techman doing the environmental consulting report for the proposed Elko mine.

You simply won't find a lower fare.

Victoria to:	Return Fare
Calgary	$ 92
Edmonton	$101
Vancouver	$ 35

If you've shopped around, you'll know that these prices are as low as any available. For example, you could save up to 31% of the regular fare depending on where you're going.

You'll fly on regularly-scheduled Air Canada flights and, on your way, you'll enjoy Air Canada's top-flight service — both on the ground and en route. That means a lot, and you don't have to pay extra for it.

The conditions of travel are quite simple. Just book and pay for your flight at least 7 days before departure, and plan on staying at least until the following Sunday morning, or as long as 46 days. There is a cancellation penalty of $20, and the fares are only effective until May 31. So plan now and book soon, because seats are limited.

And don't forget, we also have Charter Class Canada fares to every city we serve in Canada more than 640 kilometres apart. Ask your travel agent or Air Canada about all our fares. Their advice won't cost you a dime. And it could save you a pretty penny.

Kitsilano Spraying Rejected

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal department of agriculture has withdrawn its controversial application to spray Vancouver's Kitsilano area with insecticide designed to wipe out the gypsy moth.

"We were informed by our plant quarantine division in Ottawa that they consider the insecticide dimilin to be a possible danger," said department spokesman J. D. Fitzgerald.

The application was met with outcries from area residents and from the Greenpeace Foundation, the environmental organization whose office is located in the area. Greenpeace promised to organize a strong protest against the program.

A spokesman for the B.C. pesticide control branch said that dimilin was under review by the U.S. environmental protection agency as a potential cause of cancer.

"At the moment, we don't know what were going to do next," said Fitzgerald. "We've been left up in the air. The best material to deal with these insects is now unavailable to us."

The gypsy moth eats the leaves of almost all deciduous trees.

Greenpeace president Pat Moore, who said his group is pleased with the decision, said agriculture department representatives have been invited to a public meeting Feb. 22 to discuss the problem with local residents.

Marchand Fight Vow On Skagit

Federal Environment Minister Len Marchand said Friday Ottawa will do anything within its power to prevent Seattle City Light from raising the Ross Dam and flooding more of B.C.'s Skagit Valley.

Marchand said in an interview if provincial negotiations with the city utility fail, the federal government will take action.

He said the government will try to find some way to prevent the Ross Dam from being raised. One method that has been looked at is an amendment to the International River Improvements Act.

But whatever happens, the minister said, the federal government is determined not to allow the dam to be raised.

Earlier, provincial Environment Minister Rafe Mair said he would be meeting soon with Mayor Charles Royer of Seattle on the Skagit Valley issue.

Royer has said he wants to meet with Premier Bill Bennett on the subject but the premier said the responsibility lies with Mair.

Mair said his staff has been in contact with Royer's staff for the past six or eight weeks.

The question of raising the Ross Dam has been debated for more than a decade. The Skagit Valley is about 160 kilometres east of Vancouver.

Union's Legal Action Ties Up Grain Ship

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Liberian-registered freighter was arrested in port Friday after a union took legal action against the ship's owners on behalf of 23 Korean crew members, police said.

A spokesman for the National Harbors Board police said the International Transportation Federation launched a civil suit in county court against the owners of the Flora in an effort to get about $200,000 in back pay for the crew.

Police said, however, that it appears the crew is not in dispute with the captain of the ship and the union might have taken action for the crew without the crew's overt support.

Officials of the city sheriff's office posted notices of seizure on the ship, meaning the vessel, here to load grain for Japan, cannot leave the harbor until the dispute is settled.

Union spokesman were not available for comment.

Harbor police could not say who the owners of the ship are.

'GUILTY' OF RAPE

PENTICTON (CP) — A Victoria man was convicted Thursday in Penticton County Court of raping a woman in a hotel room last April 21.

Sennen Dominic Charleson, 24, was found guilty despite defence claims that he has hypoglycemia, a disease arising from low blood sugar, and symptoms of his condition include blackouts and abnormal behavior.

Charleson's lawyer, Michael Ford Smith, called on Penticton psychiatrist Victor Mollerup to give evidence for the defence but this was rebutted by Derek Eaves of Vancouver.

Tax Ruling Appeal Lost

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Court of Appeal has upheld a lower court judgment that the New Democratic Party government's succession duty tax was unconstitutional during the four years it was in effect.

[illegible] appeal court ruling says the NDP government had no legal power to write its own version of the succession duty tax.

Duties from estates taxed during the four-year period until the law was repealed by the Social Credit government totalled in the millions.

Justice J. D. Lambert says the law is not valid because it taxes the beneficiary of a will who is receiving an estate from outside the province. The judge says under the British North America Act the province does not have the power to take such action.

Part of the case before the court was a bid by Canada Trust to get back $30,000 it paid the province on a $250,000 estate.

Federal-Provincial Pact Reached on Spill Handling

Federal Environment Minister Len Marchand and B.C. Environment Minister Rafe Mair said Friday they agree in principle on jurisdiction guidelines in the event of spills of oil and other hazardous materials.

They told a news conference they made progress on environmental concerns during their meeting, reaching agreement on joint approaches to several problems.

Referring to the jurisdictional guidelines formulated, Mair said the nature of the catastrophe would determine which government would take the lead in facilitating cleanup.

"What we're saying here is that we will arrive at a formal document that will set certain things out," Marchand said. " We have certain capabilities on the federal side and so do the provinces."

The ministers said the agreed in principle to sign an accord for the protection and improvement of environmental quality. The pact will facilitate better co-ordination and reduce overlap between government programs and allow for other agreements to deal with specific problems and areas.

Marchand said there have been instances where overlaps have occurred.

"Earlier on, when Environment Canada first started, a lot of the provincial governments across the country did not have any capability," said the Kamloops MP. "Now as provinces across the country get more and more capability in the environmental area, we'd like to clarify what each other is doing."

The ministers also said that land disposal of sewage should be encouraged where economically and environmentally feasible. A land disposal system will be studied in Kamloops, Mair's riding, in addition to a study of sewage disposal in the Thompson River basin.

"It's not just a Kamloops problem, it's a B.C. problem," Mair said.

They also said provincial and federal environment officials should review any duplication of activities between the two agencies.

A $60,000 pre-planning study of the Thompson-Shuswap river basin will be implemented, to allow for early action on the most serious sewage disposal problems and prepare for a full two-to-three year study, the ministers said.

They also said they will sign an agreement to proceed with the second phase of the federal-provincial Fraser River estuary study. A co-ordinator will be appointed to begin development of an over-all management plan.

"The whole Fraser River area is one of the most environmentally-sensitive areas in our province," Marchand said. "We certainly don't want to stop development but we want to direct it in a proper way so we can preserve, hopefully, as much of the estuary as there is now and perhaps improve some of it."

front, and a meaner monkey in the side room where the safe was kept.

The hotel served as a drop-off for booze bottled in Fernie, 50 kilometres to the west, and loaded on to rail cars at Crowsnest for shipment into the U.S.

Andy Good's old hotel burned down in 1922. It was succeeded by the Summit Hotel, the lone haven for hospitality in Crowsnest and inside the purported boundaries of Loges des Corbeaux.

The Summit's bar manager, Anne Allen, at first dismissed the man who would be king from Cranbrook as "another crackpot."

Then she got to thinking: "You never know. He could know what he's talking about."

Turner plans to take care of contemporary history himself. He intends to plant a few historical markers in his lonesome principality, then bury time capsules containing records of the land's history.

Meanwhile, he pursues a fight "aided by friendly lawyers" to have his principality recognized, and talks about the possibility of collecting tolls from CP Rail trains and from the motorists winding through the Rockies on Highway 3.

There still are plenty of elk, deer, sheep and bear in Loges des Corbeaux. There may be coal underground. The legendary Lost Lemon Mine, target of speculators during the Depression, is rumored to lie hidden in the general area.

King Wisukitsak Turner has thought through the general policy he will implement should he ever be recognized by surrounding jurisdictions.

"The constitution will consist of whatever suits me at the moment," he says. "There will be a strict barter system, but if the gold mine is found I will establish a gold standard and the dollar be damned."

Editorial Offices Machine-Gunned

GUATEMALA CITY (Reuter) — Fifteen men machine-gunned the editorial offices of one of Guatemala's major newspapers Thursday before guards drove them off in a gunfight, a spokesman for the paper said. Rolando Sierra, news editor of el Grafico, a liberal morning paper, said the offices were empty and no one was hurt.

Gunmen Kill Spanish Guard

MADRID, Spain (AP) — A member of Spain's civil guard was shot and killed Thursday by two gunmen waiting in ambush outside his suburban Madrid home, police reported. A spokesman said the gunmen were believed to be members of GRAPO, a Maoist group which claimed responsibility for the assassination in Madrid last month of Supreme Court Justice Miguel Cruz Conde.

Eight-year-old Lori Mills takes regular classroom turn at playing "teacher".

This School's Oral Program A Renaissance In Expression

max low

You listen and hear children the same age as your own speaking beautifully and you realize why the two women were rebels with a cause.

Though they don't like to be called that, head teacher Bridget Flynn and teacher Joyce Zink broke away from the public school system when Bank Street School closed and started a private one of their own.

Behind the move was a disagreement with the Greater Victoria School Board over the handling of the Oral Communications program that Miss Flynn had started and run successfully at Bank Street for four years.

Bank Street students were all supposed to go to Margaret Jenkins and the oral program was "supposed" to be carried on there. Both women knew neither would happen.

They were right.

As Carol Pickup, then a trustee and now school board chairman, has since pointed out in her argument for not closing any more schools: "The oral communications program was destroyed when Bank Street was closed."

It was destroyed as far as the public school system was concerned but it lives on, thanks to Miss Flynn and Mrs. Zink who opened their Renaissance School in an old church building on Niagara in James Bay last September.

Many parents who believed implicitly in the program refused to send their children to Margaret Jenkins and instead kept them with the two women, even though it meant paying fees. Since then, the pair have been joined on the teaching staff by Bridget's nephew Dan Flynn and the original breakaway students have gained new classmates from several other schools.

Exactly the same subjects the other schools get are taught at Renaissance but the emphasis is placed on children being able to express themselves.

"We set up opportunities where we maximize speech," Bridget explains.

"Show and tell is not enough at school! I was at a junior high and some of those boys would be in the principal's office trying to defend themselves and they just couldn't do it. They were caught in an emotional situation and could only keep repeating two or three basic phrases.

"Here, the children are co-creators of the learning situation with the teachers," Joyce explains. "In the public schools it's almost a dictatorial setup.

"For our students it's a sharing and learning together, with the older ones helping those younger and correcting them in their grammar and pronunciation.".

I wandered around the little school, watching the students work in small groups and I couldn't help being impressed.

There was eight-year-old Lori Mills taking her turn as "teacher" and encouraging her "students" to construct a sentence.

There was a whole group of Grade 1 kids with Joyce Zink (including a couple of five-year-olds) reading sentences off the blackboard and writing.

"We feel there is no reason why they can't learn to write straight away," she says. "We don't see why they should labor over printing (as the public schools insist) for two years and then forget it."

And later there were all of them working with poise and confidence with the University of Victoria's creative drama group, which visits the school twice a week.

Dr. Barbara McIntyre, who is in charge of the drama group, is very impressed with the Renaissance oral program.

"We have been used to working with students in other schools and have found they're not so willing to join in," she says.

"On Wednesday, the drama students came here and put on a Valentine's play that needed a solution. Well, the students got so involved that they turned the whole story around, which was great.

"The students in this school are more ready to talk and I think that's because they have the tools to communicate orally. There isn't any doubt about the benefit. They are more willing to express themselves and their ability is greatly enhanced."

"I love all the reading and talking we do here," one little girl told me with wide eyes. "At the last school I went to, we were always being told to get on with silent reading."

Eleven-year-old Dana Smart enjoys the assemblies at Renaissance, where anyone who wants, is given the opportunity to speak.

"In five years at my other school I only got to go up on the stage once," she says earnestly. "And then the principal did all the talking!"

Traffic Deaths Increase

Greater Victoria had 41 traffic fatalities in 1978, up 17 from 24 the previous year, according to year-end statistics released by local police forces.

Colwood and Victoria City were the most dangerous areas with 10 fatalities each.

There were six in Sooke, six in Saanich, five in Sidney, three in Central Saanich, one in Oak Bay and none in Esquimalt.

The Oak Bay death in traffic was the first in almost four years.

In 1977 Colwood had led the list with eight, while Victoria City and Saanich each had seven and Sidney had two. There were none in Sooke, Oak Bay, Central Saanich and Esquimalt.

Prison Shutdown Plan Sparks Site Proposal

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

A 10-year-old scheme to turn William Head into a centre for marine research should be revived, Chamber of Commerce manager Brian Small said today.

"In 1969 the chamber put forward a proposal for a research centre but everyone said it was a pipe dream because the prison would never be moved.

"Now our dream has come true and we should make the best use of our opportunity."

Closure of the prison by 1984 was announced Friday by program director Colin Sheppard.

The prison is being made redundant by construction of a 400-inmate institution at Kamloops.

The shutdown will mean the loss of 127 jobs but more than 1,000 new jobs could be created at a marine sciences centre, Small said.

"And they would be highly-skilled and well-paid jobs. It would be a large payroll and the economic benefits would be enormous."

It will be five years before the prison is closed but Victoria must begin now to reserve the area for ocean sciences research.

"There is no site quite like it anywhere. It could become world famous."

The original proposal, drawn up in 1969, was for the establishment of four major institutions in the William Head area.

—The Lester Pearson World College of the Pacific.

—The three-universities biological laboratory.

—The federal ocean sciences institute.

—A centre of the International Sciences Foundation.

Because of land limitations at the time, only Pearson College was located in the area.

The biological lab went to Bamfield and the ocean sciences institute went to Pat Bay.

Small said the International Sciences Foundation is still looking for sites and there are many other organizations of a similar nature that would find the location ideal.

The fact that two marine institutions are located elsewhere on the Island should help, not hinder, similar development at William Head.

Ocean research is a rapidly expanding field and the site is ideal, he said.

In 1969 the noted underwater researcher Jacques Cousteau expressed interest in establishing his headquarters at William Head if the prison could be moved.

"This is an example of the fame that the location could bring."

Ald. Larry Ryan, chairman of the Economic Development Commission, said today the decade-old chamber proposal sounds ideal for the William Head site.

Ryan, who is also secretary of the Victoria Labor Council, expressed concern about the apparent loss of 127 jobs with the closure of the prison but said even more jobs might be created through marine science research and related industries there.

"The area is a little remote for any other industrial use and it is a beautiful site for research."

He said the experience at Bamfield should be studied by Victoria officials to see how the William Head site could best be put to use as a marine research centre.

Ryan said while there might be merit in closing the William Head prison, it seems a retrograde step to be moving prisoners to a larger prison when the chances of rehabilitation seemed to be better in a smaller institution.

Blood Drive Short

This week's Red Cross blood donor drive wrapped up Friday short of its 1,010 unit goal but officials weren't too unhappy.

A Red Cross spokesman said today a clinic held at Mount Douglas school drew 124 donors for a week-long total of 910.

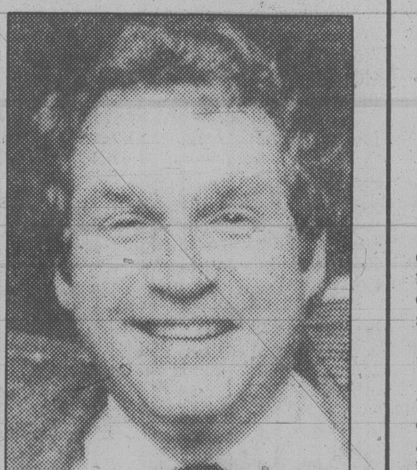
Thieves Hit Liquor Store

An undetermined quantity of liquor was stolen overnight from the Saanich store on McKenzie Ave., police said today.

The thieves broke the front glass door to get in.

The outlet was closed this morning while employees conducted a complete stock audit to see what was taken.

Cocky Gibson Says Trudeau Sure Winner



GIBSON

Prime Minister Trudeau will put up the fight of his life in the next federal election and the Liberals will win, a confident Gordon Gibson said Friday.

Gibson and Senator Ray Perrault, both previous provincial Liberal leaders, attempted to generate enthusiasm among provincial Liberals for the federal election expected later this year.

The 400 Empress Hotel delegates to the party's provincial convention gave Gibson, who resigned Feb. 16 to become national director of the Liberal party, a standing ovation.

Gibson said if the Canadian dollar is undervalued it is because of the threat to national unity and the policy proposals of Conservative leader Joe Clark and Conservative MP Sinclair Stevens.

He said Stevens' action in publicly speculating on exchange controls being implemented in Canada was economic sabotage for partisan purposes.

Perrault said the fight to keep Canada together is being led principally by the Liberal party and disputed Clark's statement that the next election will be fought on the economy, not national unity.

"To say that unity and the integrity of this nation is a non-issue is like saying that if a pyromaniac is running loose in the living room you should be up on the roof patching the holes," Perrault said.

Al Graham, national president of the party, said the national unity issue is much broader than French-English relations or Quebec separation, but also involves problems of regional economic disparity and western alienation.

Delegates will choose Gibson's replacement Sunday.

Jev Tothill, 49, a Duncan education specialist, and Hugh Chesley, 51, an Aldergrove contractor are the leadership candidates.

A move to split the provincial party away from the federal organization will be discussed.

Doreen Braverman, former provincial party president, said she feels the resolution has a good chance of being passed.

She said the concept of two independent parties was not well received when introduced several years ago but has since attracted a great deal of support.

The B.C. Liberal party must stop dividing its efforts between federal and provincial matters, she said.

Among topics to be discussed at the convention are national unity and federal campaign readiness.

Delegates will debate 44 resolutions and proposed amendments to the constitution.

Sewage Crisis Solved Temporarily For CRD

The Capital Region District will be given a temporary permit for a septic tank dump.

Word of the permit was given CRD chairman Murray Glazier Friday at a meeting with Environment Minister Rafe Mair.

Glazier told the minister a crisis had been reached with motels and other buildings unable to get rid of the contents of their septic tanks.

Truck operators had held a special meeting on Thursday to discuss the issue.

Also at Friday's meeting were Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis, deputy minister Ben Marr and representatives of the Pollution Control Branch.

In return for the temporary permit, Glazier promised to give finding a permanent site top priority.

"The representatives of the PCB undertook to issue a temporary permit," Glazier said, adding the PCB will choose which site is to be used, as well as set the conditions of the dumping.

Glazier said regional lands commissioner Ken Robinson has been told finding a permanent dumping site is a priority item.

Glazier said $200,000 was set aside last fall for purchase of a site.

He told Mair that dumping the contents of septic tanks into one of Sidney's settling ponds is not the solution because it is too far — and therefore too costly — for truck operators.

The PCB has ordered the Millstream Road dump closed and the emergency peaked this week when the PCB refused to grant a temporary permit to dump at Hartland Road.

CRD management officials decided the dumping should temporarily take place at Sidney but did not notify Sidney council.

At Wednesday's meeting of the regional board Sidney director Gerry Tregaskis read a letter notifying the regional district it would take legal action if dumping wasn't stopped within 48 hours.

Glazier says he has arranged to meet with Sidney Mayor Dick Leigh Monday.

Cave Walls Like Diamonds

By HUMPHRY DAVY
Times Staff

A group of cave explorers claims it has discovered Canada's most beautiful underground cave near Port McNeil.

Karen Bischoff of Gold River, secretary-treasurer of the B.C. Speleological Federation, said the cave has massive calcite formations and walls which glitter like diamonds.

"We have explored hundreds of caves, but this beats them all for beauty," Bischoff said.

The discovery was made by an exploration group headed by federation president Paul Griffiths, formerly of Victoria.

Hans Rohmer, a Victoria botanist, was with the party.

Bischoff said the cave's location was known but it had been only partially explored.

And no one had ever penetrated deeply because the entrance is blocked by a large pool of water.

The party donned waterproof garments and waded neck deep into the water with only one foot of air space above their heads.

Once inside, the group started exploring passages and struck one which finally led them to a huge cavern 80 feet high and several thousand feet long.

Numerous passages led off from the cavern into the dark interior of the mountain.

"There were stalagmites six feet long projecting from the floor of the cavern and stalactites hanging from the roof," Bischoff said.

"There were soda straws — thin calcite formations two or three feet in length which look like straws."

Bischoff said some parts of the walls flowed with calcite and one passage was decorated with reddish formations.

She said Griffiths explored several passages leading out of the cavern and determined it is the second longest on the island.

"In one area we found huge blocks of calcite formations which apparently had broken off the wall of the cave," she said.

"The only explanation seems to be an earthquake many years ago disturbed the interior."

The federation has been fighting to have the government recognize island caves as a resource needing protection and development as a major tourist attraction.

IRISH RUNNER SNAPS RECORD

. . .hits tape for record

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Eamonn Coghlan, Ireland's blazing miler, finally got his world indoor record, running a time of three minutes, 52.6 seconds Friday night in the San Diego Invitational track and field meet.

The mark is considered a world standard, although the International Amateur Athletic Foundation does not formally recognize indoor records.

Coghlan, virtually unbeatable on the boards, was about eight yards ahead of Steve Scott at the tape, as the first three finishers all bettered the former world mark of 3:54.9 set by Dick Buerkle in 1978.

Scott, running for the Irvine Track Club, was clocked in 3:54.1 and Steve Lacy of the University of Wisconsin finished in 3:54.7.

The 27-year-old Coughlan had come close to the mark two weeks ago in the Millrose Games, running a 3:55.0.

In another featured event, Houston McTear edged former U.S. Olympian Eddie Hart in the 60-yard dash with a meet record time of 6.16 seconds.

Greg Foster, the world record holder in the 110-meter hurdles, won the 60-yard high hurdles with a 7.11 clocking.

ANGROVE FIRST TO GO; IRISH TRIO NAMED ALL-STARS

Victoria Players Front and Centre

VANCOUVER — Victoria players were very much in the spotlight at the Western Lacrosse Association's annual draft and awards dinner here Friday.

Forward Doug Angrove, a graduate from the Victoria Legion (nee McDonalds), was the coveted first choice in the junior draft while goaltender Larry Smeltzer, defenceman Norm Baker and forward Ron McNeil were the Shamrock players earning highest praise during awards ceremonies.

Angrove, Legion's most valuable performer during the last Western Canada Major Junior League campaign, was selected first in the draft, as expected, by Nanaimo Timbermen.

As first-place finishers, Shamrocks were last of the five clubs to draft.

Victoria's first-round claim, however, belonged to Coquitlam as settlement of last year's drafting of goaltender Jim Pelzer. The goaltender refused to play in Victoria, sat out the season and his rights for this year were returned to Coquitlam. Using Victoria's claim, Coquitlam drafted Mark Tuura from New Westminster Junior Salmonbellies. Adanacs' first claim and No. 2 on the list was Dan Wilson of Burnaby.

Burnaby Cablevision also supplied the third and fourth picks — Dan Perreault, by Vancouver, and Derek Dickson, by New Westminster.

Kelly McLenaghan, a Burnaby grad in 1977 who also sat out last season, was Victoria's first bona fide claim in the second round. While there is doubt if he would leave the mainland to play in Victoria this season, Shamrocks' manager Leon Hall said McLenaghan "was the best on the board and we had to protect ourselves."

The Rocks stayed with Victoria players for the next two rounds, claiming, in order, Jim Ferguson and Greg McInnis from Legion. Rob Broomfield of Richmond Roadrunners was Victoria's fourth choice and Tom Varichello, a Coquitlam Jay-Hawks' grad, was fifth.

Smeltzer, who also won the Leo Nicholson Trophy as the WLA's top netminder, Baker and McNeill, winner of the Maitland Trophy as the player who best combined ability with sportsmanship and contributions to minor lacrosse, were named to the 1978 all-star team along with defenceman Brian Tasker of New Westminster, centre Brian Evans and forward Kevin Alexander, both of Nanaimo.

Mainland teams took all second-team berths. The choices were goalie Rick Thomas of Coquitlam; defencemen Mike Smith of Vancouver and Coquitlam's Jim Aitcheson, and forwards Wayne Goss of the Salmonbellies, Dave Tasker and Doug Hayes, both of Vancouver.

In addition to Smeltzer and McNeil, other award winners were Evans, the league scoring champion and winner of the Commissioner's Trophy as the league' outstanding player; Nanaimo's Bob Cool, the top rookie, and Bob Salt of Coquitlam, coach-of-the-year. Coquitlam also was voted the most sportsmanlike team.

Carlisle Quartet Enjoys Revenge

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

"We owe Pierce one," said second Wayne Beskau of the Ivan Carlisle rink from Port Alberni when the draw was made for the opening round of the Seagrams B.C. mixed curling championship at the Racquet Club of Victoria Friday night and Carlisle had drawn Glen Pierce of Golden Ears Winter Club as a first-round opponent.

Pierce had beaten Carlisle in the final of the Pacific Coast Curling Association men's championship at Duncan two weeks ago and had gone on from there to win the B.C. title and a berth in the Brier next month in Ottawa.

Now he was back with another rink and bidding for a place in the mixed. And Carlisle and Beskau of the Alberni men's quartet (along with Eleanor Gustene and Trudy Beskau) were waiting.

And for a while it appeared that they might be doomed to wait longer than they figured and Beskau wouldn't get his wish after all. For it started out the way the last one had ended — with Pierce in control.

But that was only the beginning. This one was destined to be different.

And it was as Carlisle came from behind a 4-1 deficit after three ends to win going away 10-6 and advance to the second round this morning against Tom Vogt of Nelson. Revenge had been sweet.

In other games in the eight-rink, modified double-knockout competition, defending champion Barry Smith of Kelowna needed a steal of one in an extra end to get by Ernie Strasdin of Prince George 7-6, Vogt edged Garry Wynne of Salmon Arm 6-5 and Bernie Sparkes of Vancouver breezed to a 10-1 victory over Dave Smith of Juan de Fuca.

Sparkes and Barry Smith were matched in the other "A" semi-final on today's first draw.

The turning point in the Carlisle-Pierce battle came in the fifth end when, with Pierce leading 4-2 and having the hammer, he fanned a takeout in the back eight-foot, giving Carlisle a steal of two to draw even at 4-4.

Pierce again took the lead with a single in the sixth, but Carlisle came back with two in the seventh to go ahead. Pierce evened matters in the eighth, but some costly misses in the ninth gave Carlisle a free draw for three.

However, he came up light and had to settle for two. It proved to be enough, giving him an 8-6 edge coming home. And when Pierce went down to throw his last desperation shot, Carlisle was lying four with the game in hand and in a strangely similar situation, but in reverse, to which he (Carlisle) had been in two weeks earlier in Duncan when he was the loser.

Strasdin appeared headed for an upset victory over Barry Smith when he followed a deuce in the seventh with steals of singles in the eighth and ninth ends to be two up at 6-4 coming home.

But Smith made a clutch shot with his first rock in the 10th, partially ducking behind cover for shot. Strasdin elected to try for a raise on his own stone biting the 12-foot rather than a takeout on Smith's rock, and missed.

This gave Smith a free draw for the tying point, which he accepted; and then he won it in the 11th with a rock in the front 12-foot when Strasdin came up light on his final draw attempt.

The Vogt-Wynne match was a nip-and-tuck affair from the start. Vogt drew first blood with two in the first which Wynne matched in the second. A steal of one in the fifth gave Vogt a 5-2 edge but Wynne returned the favor with a steal of one in the ninth to be all even at 5-5 coming home. Vogt didn't have to throw his last rock as Wynne missed with his final stone.

Sparkes had little trouble with Dave Smith, who couldn't find his game.

Sparkes blanked the second, got two in the third and then things went from bad to worse for Smith.

He rolled out on a hit in the fourth, giving Sparkes a steal of one; he was heavy with a last-rock draw against three in the fifth giving Sparkes a gift of three more and misery really loved company in the sixth when Sparkes stole four. Game over after six ends.

Tonight's fourth draw goes at 8 p.m. with the fifth Sunday at 10 a.m. and a sixth, if necessary, at 3 p.m.

Sherri in Front

KAMLOOPS, B.C. (CP) — Sherri Bath of Victoria suffered her first defeat in five games Friday but retained first place in the British Columbia junior women's curling championship.

Patti Jennings of North Vancouver upset Bath 8-5 in the fifth draw and improved her record to 3-2, for a second-place tie with Diana Smith of Kimberley, Janice Nelson of Burnaby and Diana Waller of Kamloops.

In other fifth-round play, Smith dumped Jodi Breault of Dawson Creek 10-3, Nelson beat Sandy Rooke of Vedder 9-5 and Waller doubled Karina Dziuba of Kitimat 10-5.

In the fourth round, Jennings beat Nelson 12-5, Bath defeated Breault 12-4, Dziuba edged Rooke 8-7 and Waller bested Smith 8-3.

Lead Shared

CALGARY (CP) — University of Victoria and University of Saskatchewan were tied with 3-1 records heading into today's round in the Canada West University Athletic Association women' curling championship.

Defending CWUAA champion Saskatchewan, skipped by Barb Thompson, will play the University of Alberta and Victoria, skipped by Pam Taylor, faces Lethbridge. A playoff would decide the winner of the six-team, single round-robin tournament if there is a tie.

British Columbia and Lethbridge are tied for third place with 2-2 records in the six-rink event.

Michelle Sparks Vikettes

Michelle Belanger couldn't have picked a better time to turn in one of her best, all-around performances on behalf of the University of Victoria Vikettes.

A transfer from Eastern Canada, Belanger scored 18 points Friday and her best defensive display of the season helped keep Vikettes on top of Alberta Pandas in their tense, down-to-the-wire run for the second and final playoff berth in the Canada West University Athletic Association's women's basketball league.

Victoria, which also got 18 from conference scoring leader Luanne Hebb, defeated first-place Calgary Dinnies 67-62 at Calgary. That kept Victoria in second, one game ahead of Alberta, and the Vikettes must win again tonight to assure themselves of a playoff berth.

Pandas kept the pressure on Victoria by scoring a home-floor 71-61 victory over Saskatchewan. In Friday's other game, UBC Thunderettes finally ended a winless streak at 18 games by upsetting Lethbridge 64-62 in a double-overtime thriller at Vancouver.

A Victoria loss tonight and an Alberta victory would leave teams tied for second, but Pandas would claim the final playoff berth because their 3-1 series advantage over Vikettes this season.

UVic Vikings, with first place in the men's league all wrapped up, dropped an 83-81 overtime decision to Calgary Dinosaurs.

Paul Babcock's 10-foot jump shot with six seconds left in overtime proved the winning basket. But the Vikings didn't quit. They came back to score but the referee ruled Victoria's field goal came after time had expired.

It was a big win for Calgary. Now 10-7, the Dinosaurs retained a mathematical chance of catching second-place Alberta, which romped to a 104-77 victory over Saskatchewan. Also on Friday, UBC tripped Lethbridge 84-63.

Small-Town Punchers Seem to Try Harder

BRANDON, Man. (CP) — As the Canada Winter Games boxing tournament moved towards today's finals, it seemed that when you're from Horsefly, B.C., Wyoming, Ont., or Lower Sackville, N.S., you try harder.

Along with willing campaigners from Bersimis and St. Alexis Montcalm, Que., and Punnichy and Duck Lake, Sask., who bowed out in Friday's semi-finals, the small-town representatives appeared to draw extra incentive from a determination to put their locality on the map.

Or so it must have seemed to John Classens, a welterweight from Edmonton, who suffered a technical knockout at the hands of Kelly Valburg, the pride of Horsefly and a last-minute addition to the British Columbia boxing team.

And Wyoming will never be quite as obscure again if heavyweight Alex Williamson, who stopped Bill Pryor of Halifax in his semi-final, can beat out Dan Coguen of Moncton for the gold medal.

Lower Sackville produced two finalists, bantamweight Mike Nickel and light heavyweight Cedric Parsons — you try even harder when you have a name like Cedric — and Danny Thompson of Maple Ridge, B.C., is fighting for a gold in the flyweight division.

Ontario and B.C. each put five boxers into the final round and Nova Scotia had four. Quebec, which has 11 of the 15 gold medals awarded to date, has a chance to pick up three more in the ring.

All of which would add to an awesome performance by le Belle Province in the first half of the Games. Seven events besides boxing end today and Quebec has excellent gold-medal prospects in two of them — badminton and table tennis.

On Friday, the Quebecois settled for a relatively modest three victories in five finals, completing a sweep in synchronized swimming with a gold in the team competition, getting a fourth speedskating victory from Sylvie Daigle of Sherbrooke, Que.

Stefen Elmitt of Vancouver was the winner in the slalom, a combined event in which the skiers added two short-course runs to the two they put in over a longer course Wednesday. It was B.C.'s first gold medal of the Games.

Three Unbeaten

Three teams, all from Victoria, remained undefeated heading into today's windup action in the British Columbia senior "B" volleyball championships at the University of Victoria.

Scorpions and Great Pumpkin, both of Victoria, were 4-0 heading into this morning's meeting on the final draw of the round-robin preliminary action in the six-team men's playdowns.

Victoria Swampgrass defeated Vancouver Clippers, Victoria Combos and Lake Cowichan to emerge as the only unbeaten squad in the five-team women's tournament. Clippers and Lake Cowichan shared second place with 2-1 records.

Milliken and Svindt Best of Fivepinners

Sandy Milliken and Les Svindt captured the fivepin awards during the 17th week of competition in the 16th annual Victoria Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest.

Sandy started strongly to win women's honors with a 313-209-288 — 810 series in the Yarrows League at Town and Country Lanes.

Les took the men's laurels with a 296-319-294 — 909 series in the Monday Mixed League at Wilson Bowladrome.

In addition to weekly awards, both bowlers also qualified for berths in the annual Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs.

Lang's Target Toil Pays Cats Dividend

Scott Lang has been working on his shooting, and the Victoria defenceman's target practice produced a big dividend for the Western Hockey League's Cougars on Friday.

Lang scored two goals and added one assist as the Cougars stretched an unbeaten-in-February streak to seven games with a 5-3 victory over the Breakers in Seattle.

Victory boosted the Cougars, who return home to Memorial Arena to face Brandon Wheat Kings tonight, into second place in the Western Division, one point ahead of New Westminster Bruins.

Although possessor of one of the hardest shots on the Victoria team, Lang has concentrated recently on keeping his shots lower and with better direction. Improvement was noted Wednesday when Lang fired nine shots directly on the target in an 8-3 victory over Edmonton Oil Kings.

Although he went pointless in that game, his blasts from the point created considerable anxiety for Edmonton netminders.

His point shooting was effective again Friday, although his second of the night and seventh of the season was scored the easy way — into an open net after Seattle pulled goaltending Ken Hodge in a gamble for a tie.

Centre Gary Lupul, with his 37th and 38th, also scored a pair for Victoria while Mike Shields added the other.

While Lang and Lupul sparked the attack, goaltender Steve Amiss was the defensive standout. He made 31 saves, including 14 in the opening period, to backstop the victory.

In other games Friday, Mike Toal's two goals sparked Portland Winter Hawks to a 7-4 victory over Edmonton while in Lethbridge, the Broncos topped the Central Division-leading Billings Bighorns 7-3.

RAMBLERS MEET BAYS IN FINAL

It will be Mt. Douglas Ramblers and Oak Bay in the final of the South Vancouver Island senior high school girls' basketball tournament.

The showdown, starting at 8 tonight, will be played at Oak Bay.

Ramblers, sparked by Donna Braden's 11 points, advanced by defeating Spectrum 43-29 while Oak Bay defeated Victoria High Tigers 49-31 in Friday's semi-finals at Esquimalt.

Sue Chowen scored 12 points to spark Oak Bay while Tracy Wenman topped the Tigers with 15.

Victoria and Spectrum will play off for third place.

Grads Tie Legion

Terry Parsons and Bruce Jeffries each scored a pair of goals Friday as Esquimalt Legion battled Esquimalt graduates of the South Island Junior "B" Hockey League to a 6-6 tie at the Sports Centre.

Mark Ekstrom and Kelly Bryant counted Legion's other goals while Kevin Kennedy (2), Kevin Park, Dave Layle, Kerry Brewster and Lance Hobbs scored for Grads.

Debbies Capture Golds

EDMONTON — University of Victoria athletes claimed three medals Friday in the Canada West University Athletic Association's indoor track and field championships.

The Debbies — Campbell and Scott — lived up to premeet expectations and captured gold medals on the track while Brent Fougner won a silver medal with a leap of 6.61 metres in the long jump. Fougner competed despite a leg injury.

Scott battered the 3,000 metre record with an impressive time of 9:31.1 while Campbell won the 800 in 2:12.1.

Score One for Charley

NEW YORK (AP) — Score one for Charley Finley in his continuing war of words with baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

Finley received clearance Friday from Kuhn to sell two minor-league players to New York Yankees for half a million dollars — but it wasn't easy.

It took a 2½-hour hearing in Kuhn's office before the commissioner agreed to allow George Steinbrenner's Yankees to purchase catcher Bruce Robinson and pitcher Greg Cochran from Finley's Oakland A's for $500,000.

It marked the first time Finley has come out on top in one of these hearings. Previously, Kuhn had voided Finley's attempted sales of outfielder Joe Rudi and pitcher Rollie Fingers to Boston Red Sox for $2 million and pitcher Vida Blue to the Yankees for $1.5 million in 1976 and Blue to Cincinnati Reds for $1.75 million 18 months later.

This time, however, Kuhn gave Finley the green light to ring up the Oakland cash register and deposit the Yankees' dollars.

The Robinson-Cochran sales had fit into the commissioner's guidelines which limit cash transactions between clubs to $400,000 per player.

June Windup Predicted For Soccer

Times News Services

A melancholy piece of soccer history was made Friday when an entire round of the English Football Association Cup was postponed for the first time in the competition's 108-year history.

The four fifth-round ties scheduled for today were all called off following blizzards which swept Britain this week.

The other four matches could not take place because the teams involved had not settled their fourth-round games.

Even Leicester City, with a protective balloon that has been the envy of other clubs this winter, has had problems. The polythene tent which covers the pitch collapsed under the weight of snow.

The English soccer backlog now is approaching the level reached in the bitterly cold winter of 1963 and one official said the season may have to be extended until June.

Elsewhere and also in the world of sport . . .

Coaches in the National Hockey League are interested in forming their own union or association and may have one by next season, says Alan Eagleson, executive-director of the NHL Players Association.

He said several coaches have approached him and that he has told them he is prepared to help on an informal basis. "I would advise them, but I wouldn't be their lawyer."

He said a coaches union is an idea whose time has arrived.

"Coaches should be entitled to rights and benefits like anyone else," he said. "But if a coaches association is formed, there also should be some restrictions placed on it, similar to the restrictions placed on players by the collective bargaining agreement."

For example, he said, they shouldn't be able to criticize referees.

He is allowed out of prison each Tuesday and Thursday evening to supervise training and again on Sunday afternoons to attend matches.

It was racing as usual, but betting only for "win" or the "daily double" at New York's Aqueduct racetrack as substitutes replaced striking mutuel clerks to take bets and pay winners among some 5,000 fans on hand Friday.

The strike resulted from employee resistance to automation of betting, which is expected to reduce the need for mutuel clerks when a computer system becomes operational at Belmont Park on May 13. Aqueduct, Belmont Park and Saratoga race tracks are operated under a rotation system by the New York Racing Association.

The strike in its first day had blocked all on-track betting on Thursday, diverting the betting business to Off-Track Betting Corp. parlors.

All 550 betting machines had been sabotaged in advance of the strike and a complaint by the track was under investigation.

The trial of 21 defendants accused of racketeering and fixing races at six U.S. East Coast tracks was set for April 30 after District Judge W. Arthur Garrity, Jr,. withdrew from the case in Boston this week.

Magistrate Lawrence Cohen, who accepted innocent pleas at arraignments of many of the defendants, said the case was assigned to Judge A. David Mazzone.

Garrity reported that he supervised a long probe of one of the defendants in the early 1960s when he was U.S. attorney. He said his impartiality might reasonably be questioned, and therefore he was withdrawing.

Panthers Grab Top Spot, Leave Next Three in Tie

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

A team that had trouble getting off the ground at the start of the season is the king of the hill today in the Greater Victoria high school boys' basketball league.

Parkland Panthers, who could scrape up only nine players to start the season, nailed down first place Friday night with a 77-69 victory over Oak Bay Bays at Parkland and threw three other schools into a second-place tie in the final standings.

In a battle between a pair of previously winless squads, Rod Chow fired 23 points to pace Reynolds Roadrunners to a 67-52 triumph over Claremont Spartans.

Victory was the 10th without a loss in league play for coach Joe Milligan's Panthers and left the defending champion Bays with an 8-2 mark, the same as Mt. Doug Rams and Belmont Braves.

The first-place finish gives Parkland an automatic berth in the Island "AA" finals in two weeks in Nanaimo. The second-place finisher also gets a free ride to the Hub City and that means the Rams, Bays and Braves must play off for the spot.

Lower Island league chairman Ash Valdal of Vic High sorted it out after Friday night's game at Parkland. A coin toss gives Mt. Doug a bye while Belmont meets Oak Bay Monday at 4 p.m. at Vic High. The winner meets the Rams Tuesday at 4 p.m., also at Vic High, for second place.

It was impossible to determine second place on the basis of league results because Oak Bay beat Mt. Doug, Mt. Doug beat Belmont and Belmont beat Oak Bay.

In addition to the first two finishers, two other Greater Victoria schools get into the Island "AA" finals and they'll determine those berths through Lower Island playdowns next Thursday and Friday.

Joining Parkland, Oak Bay, Mt. Doug and Belmont in the Lower Island playoffs will be Vic High Totems, fifth-place finishers with a 6-4 record, and Spectrum, 3-6 with one schedule game to play Monday at home against Dunsmuir Demons (2-7).

Spectrum actually finished seventh behind Stelly's Stingers, who had a 5-5 mark, but Stelly's will enter single-A playdowns along with Dunsmuir, Reynolds and Claremont.

Esquimalt Dockers (3-7) finished eighth and failed to qualify for the Lower Island "AA" playoffs.

The Lower Island playdowns begin Thursday with Vic High playing at the home court of the team finishing third in the Monday-Tuesday playoffs. Spectrum plays at the home of the fourth-place team, also on Thursday.

On Friday, action shifts to the old gym at UVic where Thursday's winners meet to determine third and fourth placings in the Lower Island in a game starting at 7. That will be followed by an 8:30 contest between Parkland and the second-place league finisher to determine the one and two spots in the Lower Island.

Tanner Seems Good Bet

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — With Jimmy Connors, Bjorn Borg and John McEnroe all sent packing, overlooked Roscoe Tanner suddenly seems a good bet to successfully defend his title in the $250,000 Tennis Games.

The eighth seed despite his 1978 victory in this event, Tanner continued the tournament's string of upsets when he knocked off the top-seeded Connors 4-6, 6-3, 7-6 in their quarter-final match Friday.

In earlier rounds, No.2 seed Borg lost to Brian Manson and third-seeded John McEnroe fell to Eliot Teltscher.

Tanner, a former Stanford star, was to play Teltscher in one semi-final today while fourth-seeded Harold Solomon faced No.5 Brian Gottfried in the other. The winner of Sunday's final match will earn $35,000.

Tanner finally won the match on a 10-8 tie-breaker.

To commemorate the first Olympic Games ever held in the USSR, the Soviet government has authorized a limited issue of beautiful solid silver Brilliant Uncirculated Coins in denominations of 5 and 10 Roubles.

The second series of this issue–five Coins celebrating some of the 1980 Olympic competitions–is now available for examination at select coin dealers.

They are the first silver Rouble Coins minted in over half a century and magnificent works of art in .900 fine silver. The issue is so limited that only a fraction of 1976 Olympic Coin collectors will be able to own them.

In addition, the second gold 100 Rouble Coin in this collection is now available as well as the first of five platinum Coins.

Finning's SOS analysis gives you inside information on your equipment

SOS analysis. That's Finning's Scheduled Oil Sampling: an early warning service that tells you what's happening inside engines, transmissions, hydraulics and final drives - before something serious happens.

Here's how SOS works. When you want to know the health of your machine, send oil samples from the various systems to our laboratory. Our SOS specialist uses an atomic absorption spectrophotometer and other sophisticated test equipment to measure the chemical changes in the oil and determine the presence of metal deposits, dirt, fuel or other contaminants. Then we'll tell you the results. We'll let you know whether you can use the oil safely for an extended period. And if unusual contaminants or abnormal wear patterns show up, we'll tell you what immediate action should be taken.

At only pennies per operating hour, SOS analysis is a preventive maintenance program you shouldn't be without. It avoids unnecessary repairs and keeps minor repairs minor. It warns against premature breakdown, and it can mean big savings in repair bills and lost production.

Like any inspection program, Scheduled Oil Sampling works best when you use it regularly. Finning's SOS is another unmatched CAT PLUS support service.

Variety Shows With Leaders

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — A varied group of golfers were at the top entering today's third round of the Tucson Open — a cross-handed putter, the second alternate and a one-time football running back from Morgan State.

"It was a good solid round, a solid 66," Bruce Lietzke, the cross-handed putter, said Friday after that four-under-par round had staked him to a three-shot lead halfway through this chase for a $45,000 first prize.

"I threw away a couple of shots," Lietzke said after posting his 129 total, 11 strokes under par.

Closest to him at 132 were a pair of rookies — Mike Brannan, the second alternate, and Jim Thorpe, the one-time Morgan State running back.

Brannan, who got into the tournament only when a couple of original starters withdrew, fired a 68. And Thorpe, a long-hitting 212-pounder and the last man on the course, birdied his last four holes for a 65. He drove green-high on two par-four holes in that closing burst.

Defending champion Tom Watson moved into title contention at 133.

The group at 134 included Jim Nelford of Burnaby, who shot 70 Friday.

Both Dave Barr of Kelowna and Dan Halldorson of Brandon were in a group at 136. Barr shot a 67 Friday, while Halldorson had a 68. George Knudson of Toronto missed the cut with a 141 following Friday's 69.

Post Chasing Leader

MIAMI (AP) — Amy Alcott held a two-stroke lead going into today's third round of the Ladies Professional Golf Association's $100,000 tournament.

But the 22-year-old pro says she thinks she can do better. "I don't feel like I've touched my potential as yet," she said after carding her second straight 70 Friday for a 140 total and a two-stroke lead over Canadian-born Sandra Post. In Friday's round, Post missed an 18-inch putt on her last hole to settle for a second-round 71 and a 142 total.

Only Alcott, Post and first-round leader Hollis Stacy, who fired a 74, were below par after 36 holes.

Cathy Sherk of Port Colborne, Ont., shot a second-round 76 for a 150 total and made the cut in her first professional tournament.

St. Lucia, Heaven in the Caribbean

ON THE GO

With Jerry Hulse

ST LUCIA — As an old island hand I must tell you about St. Lucia, a bit of heaven that broke off into the Caribbean just a sigh from Martinique.

It is small (27 miles long, 14 miles at the widest) but devilishly green and breathtakingly beautiful.

Yes, and even a bit unspoiled.

Clouds hang on the horizon and jungles sweep from volcanic peaks and hillocks to the sea and in places the growth is so thick day becomes night.

When I arrived it had been raining. The headlights of an ancient taxi stabbed the evening darkness and steam rose from the pavement.

The taxi bumped along through the night. Deftly, the driver dodged potholes and the fallen branch of a tree.

He spoke with the softness of the West Indies islander.

"Hot, suh, very hot tonight."

"Feels god," I replied.

"Your first visit here?"

I nodded.

He smiled. "Oh, you'll find this a beatiful island. Yes, suh, a most beautiful island."

At a junction he switched to another road. It was filled with still more potholes. The night was moonless and black.

Finally, as the taxi sputtered around a curve, lights glowed from Anse Chastanet, one of St. Lucia's proudest resorts.

Anse Chastanet provides 21 doubles in octagonal rooms with electric fans spinning in the ceiling and breezes flowing through the windows so air conditioning isn't required.

The units are strung up a hill that overlooks a black-sand beach, and at night guests are lulled to sleep by the surf and the singing frogs.

A couple of peaks, the Pitons, rise heavenward like those on Moorea. Indeed, there's a feeling here of the South Seas. And like resorts in the South Seas, Anse Chastanet is a place to come to rest. There is little else to do but read, sun, swim and meditate. And what's so bad about that?

At breakfast the next morning an Italian guest snapped a picture of a waitress. She smiled cooperatively. He was lucky. I know of islands in the Caribbean where you'd lose your shutter — or worse — doing that.

But Anse Chastanet, like the rest of St. Lucia, exudes a friendship and informality that puts one at ease.

Like its guest quarters, the dining room at Anse Chastanet is open and octagonal. The dinner menu makes mention of sauteed sausage, pumpkin consomme, yams, mango ice cream and other elections, many of them creole.

A stairway leads to the beach — an exercise involving 123 steps — where barbecue buffets are featured along with West Indian soups and salads.

The resort is operated by a couple of Canadians, Wayne Brown and Nick Troobitscoff, who ran off to the Caribbean to escape the northern freezes. Daily winter rates start at $85 single or $100 double, including breakfast and dinner. Off-season (April 16 through Dec. 14), the figures drop to $39 and $64.

Besides guest rooms, the proprietors rent out three villas overlooking the same black-sand beach. The Largest, a four-bedroom, four-bath affair, is available for $800 a week.

And then there is Dasheene, one of the slickest hideways in the entire Caribbean. On a hilltop at the center of the Pitons, its 16 condominiums are without walls. Well, on the ocean side, anyway.

It's a trip, a shocker. And with one of the loveliest views on earth. Guest seated in the living room lean back seated in the living room lean back and relax, staring out past the missing wall.

There's nothing between themselves and the sea, absolutely nothing. Just space. And yes, of course, it rains. Only nobody gets wet. The trades see to that, blowing the moisture out to sea. (Or so the management claims.)

The cut for spending a night at Dasheene this winter comes to $45 for a one-bedroom apartment, $55 for two bedrooms and $75 for three bedrooms on the European plan.

Just in case someone should get hooked by the view out the missing wall, the apartments are on sale starting at $15,000. Drop a line to Lionel Couture, c-o Dasheene, Soufriere, St. Lucia, West Indies.

Those suffering from vertigo needn't apply.

Between here and the capital of Castries the land is trewn with palms, breadfruit and nutmeg trees, coffee plants, banana plantations and a tangle of jungle vines.

Goats and pigs cross the road at will, all of which makes a bit of skillful control necessary at the wheel of a car.

Above the colorful, tin-roofed town of Castries, ex-RCA executive Len Headly and his wife, Pat, have created a string of fashionable apartments in a building formerly occupied by British civil servants.

Called Top O' the Morne, the apartments provide a view of the harbor below and Martinique on the horizon.

These are the very same waters in which the British and French fought over St. Lucia during a turbulent 150-year period. The islands changed hands more than a dozen times. While the British eventually won out, the French influence remains to this day in the tone of the architecture and cuisine.

At any rate, Top O' the Morne makes for some splendid viewing. With an even dozen apartments, winter tariffs range from $32 a day for a studio to $56 for a two-bedroom unit. Each apartment comes with a fully equipped kitchen. And to enable guests to go island-snooping, the Headleys toss in a rental car for another $99 a week, with unlimited mileage.

For details, write to Top O' the Morne, P.O. Box 376, St. Lucia, West Indies.

From the Headleys' place it's only five minutes to a splendid restaurant, the Green Parrot, that's operated by a St. Lucian named Harry ("Don't ask my last name," said he) who has built himself a reputation as the island's No. 1 chef. He likes that handle: Chef Harry.

Harry is a singer to boot — his theme song is "Yellow Bird" — and once inEngland he loosened up his vocal cords for Princess Margaret. That occurred while he was at Claridge's, where he was hired on as an apprentice chef.

It turned out Harry was a student who, after a spell, returned to St. Lucia, got a bank loan and bought the Green Parrot.

Besides turning out some of the best Creole cooking on the island, Harry has built himself an inn next door. The tab for board and two rooms starts at $50 a day.

Others take their meals at a romantic old pile down on Columbus Square called Rain. And indeed it does conjure memories of Sadie Thompson in Somerset Maugham's classic tale of a debauched female shifting for herself on another green island.

A picture of Joan Crawford, who played Sadie in the 1932 version of the film, hangs on one wall, a caption beneath it reading, "Meet Sadie Thompson, a woman without shame, a woman without a soul."

Rain is the sort of place you'd expect to bump into Richard Widmark (or Bogie when he was alive.)

Customers line up downstairs at a six-stool bar, teir images reflected in an old-fashioned Coca-Cola mirror. In keeping with the mood of the place, someone has spun a date record and the words spill forth: "I'm in the mood for love..."

Waiters wear T-shirts with the name of the restaurant emblazened below theneck. They lead guests upstairs to the balconied dining room with its hurricane lamps.

As if on cue, the rain came in torrents the other night. Below the street, islanders walked barefoot through puddles, unmindful of the downpour.

Double Standards in Force

The Guernsey Caper

BY NEIL MORGAN

GUERNSEY — The Guernsey Caper began with an untested premise, that the Channel Islands offer the best of both Britain and France, their nearest neighbors. All those cheeses and pates from Normandy and Brittany, good wine, and still the wit and tradition of the British, their magic gardens and apt conversation.

So when the jet from California stopped at London's Heathrow, I picked up the Sunday Times and turned to the classifieds. There were six entries under Channel Islands.

I tore out the ad of B. Lovell, a chartered surveyor at St. Peter Port, who urged me to improve the quality of my life by moving to Guernsey and offered a free booklet called "Settling in Guernsey."

Then I flew on to Amsterdam and boarded the Royal Viking Sea, a dream of a cruise ship that would take me to my dream island.

The English Channel was docile as a kitten. I stayed up half the night reading about the Channel Islands. Guernsey and Jersey are the largest, self-governoring, each with its own laws, copper coinage, its rival breeds of cattle and rival styles of sweaters. Part of the ancient Duchy of Normandy that Britain lost to France in 1204. The islands are not part of either France or Britain, but pay allegiance to the British Crown because the Crown is also the Duke of Normandy.

We were at lunch when our ship came in, swinging around a low headland and anchoring off St. Peter Port. The harbor was a forest of sailboat poles. Half a day out of London, Sealink ferry was loading at dockside. Up wooded hills behind the harbor, steeples and tile roofs glittered in the sunlight.

At the top of the ramp a peeling sign welcomed me to the Bailiwick of Guernsey. At the first bank I picked up Guernsey coins, and at the first phone booth (like London's, but shocking orange) I dialed the only name I had for Guernsey: C. Northcote Parkinson, the witty author who propounded all those laws. No answer. Clearly my future was in my hands alone.

Pausing to watch three young men rolling barrels of tax-free Scotch into a cellar warehouse, I paced up High Street, past shops offerings tax-free alcohol, tobacco, and sweaters, and turned into Smith Street.

In the windows of B. Lovell, the chartered surveyor, were pictures of cozy cottages, short on styles but big on flowers. I went inside and introduced myself to Graham C. Loaring. My ship was in for eight hours, I explained, and I was interested in an island home. He did not precisely leap at the opportunity.

"We have this free booklet," he said, handing one over. "Browse through it and, if you like. come back and we can show you some properties.'

I settled on a bench among hyacinths in the grounds of Elizabeth College. Lacking Professor Parkinson in person, I read his introduction to the booklet. He described Guernsey as ideal for the visitor with quiet tastes and modest means. And for the escapist who dreams of an island cottage? "It is a quiet life among people who have seen the world, but who have dropped out of the ratrace."

It seemed so. From high above St. Peter Port the coast of Normandy was visible, 14 miles away. So were some of the commercial glasshouses (known here as vineries) which produce tomatoes and flowers for Britain. (Tourists are Guernsey's second industry, most of them from Britain, others from Germany and Scandinavia.)

Island population is about 60,000. The common prides are order and low tax: the 20 percent maximum tax hasn't changed sinces Nazi armies occupied the Channel Islands in 1940.

There are no taxes on capital gains. Strikes are rare, and unemployment is almost unknown.

So no wonder, in supertaxed, strike-plagued Britain, the Channel Islands seem a tax haven. The Queen is represented here only by her lieutenant-governor. The island's chief is the bailiff, who sits on a chair higher than that granted to the Queen's man.

"So the Queen usually sends us a very tall lieutenant-governor," Graham Loaring quipped when I returned to his office to discuss whether I might become a Guernseyman. "That way she manages to offset the different height of the chairs."

He was not anxious to discuss Guernsey as a tax haven. We chatted about the little neighbor island of Sark, where the late Sybil Hathaway, the Dame of Sark, held fuedal rights over the island's scattering of faramers. Under her the island banned motorcars, street lights, doves, and divorce. The island doctor recently got a waiver: he moves on house calls by tractor.

I picked up a yellow sheet on Laring's desk, offering local market properties for sale.

"I'm afraid," he said, "that would be the wrong list for you. As a non-resident, you would look at houses available on the open market list."

The light began to dawn. Prices of cottage on the open list began above $100,000, and these were extremely modest. Local market homes, on the other hand, open to legal residents, appeared to cost as little as one-third as much.

Guernsey has put a price on housing available to foreigners that simply marks up the island's stability and tax status. The double standard is in force. It's the ultimate measure of growth control. On the nearby island of Jersey, it's even tougher: only about 15 new residents are allowed each year.

Might there be an American who had moved recently to Guernsey, I wondered?

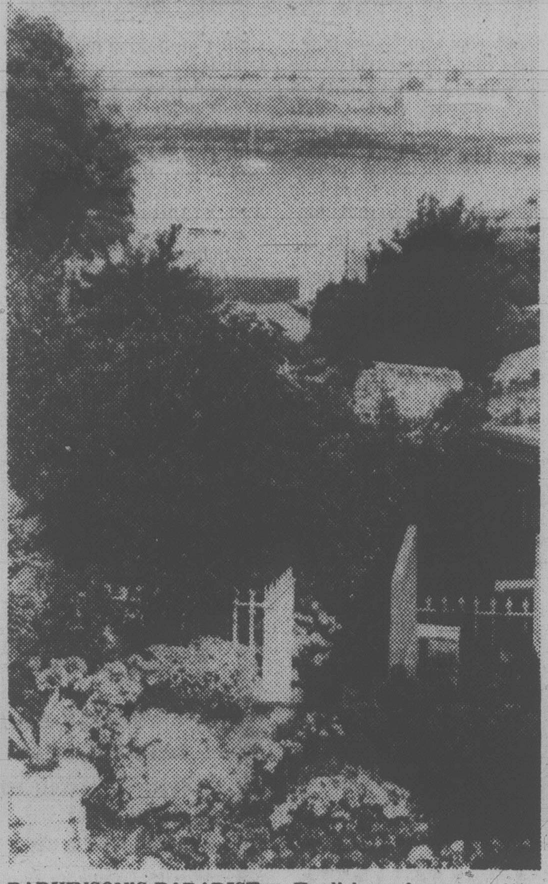
Graham Loaring thought carefully, and conceded he could name none. "I'm afraid the numbers are not so attractive to those of you outside the sterling area," he said carefully.

We exchanged cards and said our goodbyes. I trailed some tourists on a tramp around the house that Victor Hugo occupied here in exile from 1855 to 1870, dedicating "Toilers of the Sea" to this "rock of hospitality and liberty."

Then I joined the locals for a 5 p.m. beer at a waterfront pub called The Yacht, scanning the Guernsey Evening Press, which featured a page one report on a two-hour fight to save a mare's life.

The Evening Press, and a packet of 15 mixed postage stamps from the Bailiwick of Guernsey, were all I took with me back to the Royal Viking Sea at dusk.

And Professor Parkinson's phone number. Sometime I must try again to call him and ask how he managed his Guernsey caper.



PARKINSON'S PARADISE — English gardens extend 100 miles south of Britain to the Channel Islands. This view from above St. Peter Port across yacht basin to Castle Cornet, a granite jumble dating from 13th century. This was last Royalist outpost in the British Isles to fall to parliamentary forces during England's long civil war.

B and B Stands for Bed and Breakfast

B and B, what's that?

To a bartender, it's a drink. To a traveler, it's a way of spending the night in England, Scotland or Wales, which can be great fun, and certainly beats the price of many hotels! B and B stands for "bed and breakfast".

In these days of penny-wise transportation to Britain via ABC or CCF, a lot of people are looking for bargain accommodation to complement these low trans-Atlantic fares.

B and B offers a night's accommodation and full British breakfast for as little as $12-$15. With the evening meal, it can run to $17-$21 a night.

A countryside network of accommodation reservation services in Britain called "Book A Bed Ahead" can be used to make accommodation arrangements a day in advance. This service is operated by the English, Wales and Scottish Tourist Boards and many of their Tourist Information Centres offer this convenient way of finding an inexpensive room for the night. Most British towns have a Tourist Information Centre (TIC) but only those displaying a bed symbol on the official TIC name-plate are able to perform this function. A small charge is made for this reservation service and this amount will vary according to location.

Let's say one morning you decide to make a day trip by train from London to Oxford. While in Oxford you decide you want to spend the night there and travel on the next day to visit a village in the Cotswolds. What's more, you are travelling on a budget and have made no advance reservations for accommodation in Oxford or in the Cotswolds for that matter. Well, have no fear, say the people at the British Tourist Authority. You need only go to the local Tourist Information Centre in Oxford in order to locate and book a room not only in the Oxford area for one night but also to "book a bed ahead" for the next stop on your journey.

So the following day, when you arrive at your destination in the Cotswolds, you already have a place to stay. Simplicity itself.

In a nutshell, it's a way of staying in a British private home with a family. B and B is simply a system by which private residents rent out an unfilled bedroom or two. This is a marvellous way of meeting British people on their "home" ground, so to speak and provides the possibility of making many new friends.

You don't need to drive a car to go the B and B route. Although most Canadians like to tour Britain in a rental car, it is not necessary to drive to enjoy a B and B holiday. You can travel by bus with a bargain "Coachmaster" pass or by British Rail with a BritRail pass. Or buy your tickets as you go.

If you want to "play it by ear", you can always find your own B and B accommodation as you tour — the local Post Office or pub is usually a good source of information. However, many Britain-bound visitors still want to do some planning in advance and there are several useful books which can help.

The British Automobile Association offers the AA Guide to Guesthouses, Farms and Inns (recommended retail price: $6.75). Their B and B listing is 108 pages long and the premises listed are regularly inspected for cleanliness and comfort.

The "Where to Stay" books for various parts of Britain issued by the Wales, Scottish and English Tourist Boards list many bed and breakfast and guesthouse locations. These are priced as follows:

- Where to Stay in Scotland: B and B ($1.60);
- Where to Stay in Wales ($1.95);
- Where to Stay — English regions ($1.75, each region).

These books are available in Canada from any Classics or W. H. Smith bookstore coast-to-coast, or by mail from: Pendragon Books Ltd., 2525 Dunwin Drive, Mississauga, Ontario L5L 1R9; or British Travel Books, P.O. Box 903, Station A, Vancouver, B.C. V6C 2N7.

Add 50 cents per item to cover postage and handling and allow 2-4 weeks for delivery.

Veterans Tour Set

A three-week tour to England and the Continent has been arranged for Vancouver Island residents who want to visit places of special interest to former members of the armed forces.

It leaves Victoria May 16 by Air Canada and includes visits to London, Paris, Brussels, and Amsterdam, as well as guided tours at Caen, Arras, Vimy Ridge, and Nijmegen. It also includes a canal cruise and a visit to the famous Rijksmuseum in Amsterdam.

The tour was arranged by Feathersone Travel Ltd. of Victoria, in response to requests from some veterans who thought that it would be more fun to travel in a group than individually to those historic landmarks.

The trip was organized by Danny Miller, a well known Victoria travel consultant, who is a member of the Royal Canadian Legion, and who was a member of Victoria's Canadian Scottish Regiment in the early 1940's.

The package tour, arranged by Miller in co-operation with Air Canada and Global Tours Company in London, includes air fair, transfers, hotel accommodations, tours, and a number of meals. The cost is $1,780 for each person.

Although the tour is expected to attract mainly veterans, their families and friends, anyone who is interested can join if space is available.

Romantic Spain

By ARTHUR UNGER

NEW YORK — I have slept on an antique canopied bed in a room next to a 15th-century cloister in the ancient Spanish town of Olite.

I have gazed down at the harbor from my room in an ancient lighthouse built on 14th-century walls on a cliff overlooking Malaga.

I have taken by morning constitutional on the medieval ramparts of the 11th-century palace built against the walls of Avila.

And I have wandered about parts of the Spanish countryside tourists seldom see and have gotten to know an entirely different breed of people from the Spaniards one meets in the cities.

This and much more I have experienced staying in the paradores of Spain, the world's most exotic chain of hotels and the top luxury bargain in Europe today. Hidden away in some of the Continent's most romantic places, the parador system — a network of some 80 hotels run by Spain's Ministry of Tourism — offers superb accommodations at a fraction of what comparable fare would cost elsewhere — assuming that there is comparable fare anywhere.

The parador system began in the 1930s as a way to provide accommodation in areas of beauty or historical importance, where comfortable hotels were scarce. Wherever possible, old palaces, castles, and monasteries were expropriated and tastefully restored with modern conveniences.

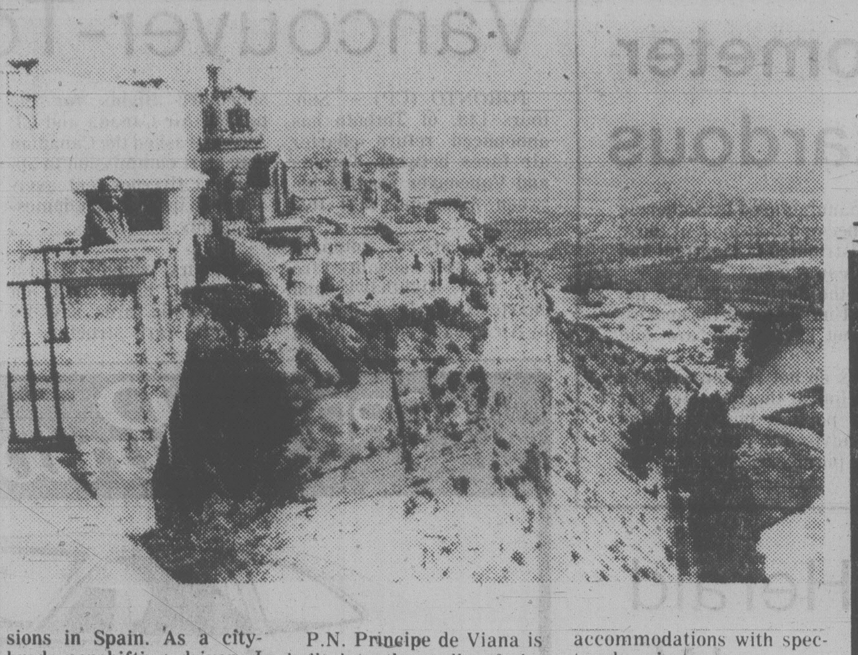
When history did not oblige with an appropriate building, new paradores were built utilizing local architecture and native materials. Of course only in an authoritarian country, such as Spain under Franco, could such a program be carried on without years of litigation.

So it is that the paradores of Spain can plop the ordinary tourist down on the very spot, sometimes in the actual building, where history was made.

Over the past six years I have visited 18 paradores and in every one enjoyed near-perfect stays with fine accommodation and superior service. Most of my fellow parador-niks were sophisticated Spaniards, knowing travelers from Western Europe, and a growing trickle of American tourists.

Abetted by some mysterious lack of communication between paradores and the world at large, these seasoned travelers tend to keep their finds secret. After all, accommodation is limited — in fact, most paradores ration their guests to a maximum of 10 days.

To reach most of these hotels you will need a car, which can be rented in the big cities. But don't expect to find automatic transmissions in Spain. As a city-bred, nonshifting driver, I have had to rent mine in Lisbon, Biarritz, and Marseilles in order to drive in Spain in the custom to which I have been conditioned.



From the balcony of his room at P.N. Casa del Corregidor, a guest can look out over the Guadalete River gorge

For instance, we had to negotiate mountain roads with hairpin bends, revealing breathtaking views of the valleys below, to reach the P.N. Casa del Corregidor in Arcos de la Frontera. We arrived at the arched entrance to the city, only to find that our compact car had to be inched through the narrow gate, built with carts in mind.

The upper part of the town has only a few hundred inhabitants, who must surely survive as part of the national-monument tourist promotion. How else could they make a living there?

The walls that surround the main market have foreign objects cemented into them. When we examined them in detail they appeared to be Roman artifacts.

The parador itself, once the home of the chief magistrate, overlooks the magnificent gorge of the Guadalete River. It has 21 rooms, most with balconies overlooking the gorge. The dining room is in a central patio, filled with hanging plants and caged birds.

We found another of my favorites, the P.N. El Emperador in Fuenterrubia, near the French border, when we were driving through the Basque country to St. Jean de Luz. We stoped for coffee, and, although this medieval castle has only 16 rooms, we were told accommodation might be available if we waited for a few hours. But we had a tight schedule and so contented ourselves with refreshment in a balcony overlooking the main lobby.

The towers have been turned into tubular buildings of extraordinary height, decorated with huge medieval banners hung vertically. When we left we felt we should be climbing onto our waiting steeds.

P.N. Gil Blas in Santillana del Mar is named after one of the writer Inigo Lopez de Mendoza's characters, supposed to have been born in Santillana. We arrived in this typical Santander hamlet (a national monument) without reservations only to be told there were no vacancies at the parlor — a local mansion. Across the road, however, was an annex, where we were given a room for $7.50 double.

Only a few kilometers away from Santillana are the caves of Altamira, containing probably the most exciting examples of European cave-painting still open to the public.

P.N. Principe de Viana is built into the walls of the ancient city, Olite, once the seat of the kings of Navarre. Three of the castle's original 15 watchtowers remain. We escaped there during the running of the bulls in Pamplona.

Though Pamplona is only about an hour's drive away, it could be in another country, another century. Instead of the all-night cafe-sitting and carousing that goes on there, the people of Olite seem to spend a great deal of time just sitting in the little park in front of the parador, gawking at the tourists. Children play on the ruined columns of the ancient cloister next door, which have gracefully evolved into street furniture.

My other favorites among the ancient paradores include the ones in Malaga (the P.N. de Gibralfare) and Avila (the P.N. Raimondo de Borgona) and Bayona (the P.N. de Conde Gondomar).

Though the modern paradores lack the thrill of living with history, most of them combine sleek, up-to-date accommodations with spectacular views.

For instance, P.N. Nerja, perched atop the cliffs in Nerja, is probably one of the lushest of all parador-resorts. It has a swimming pool and a private elevator down to the beach.

I like to find my room at a parador by driving up bravely and cajoling the desk clerk. But it is much wiser to write to the Spanish National Tourist Office (665 Fifth Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017) for a copy of their pamphlet that gives addresses, telephone numbers, and rather vague descriptions of the paradores. Then you can apply to the hotel directly specifying dates and including a deposit for at least one day's lodging (from $6 to $23.50 per day for a double room and bath).

Nipple Thermometer Seized as Hazardous

OTTAWA (CP) — Stocks of a potentially deadly children's thermometer in the form of a rubber-nippled pacifier are being seized by the federal health department.

A statement said Friday that the department's health protection branch began the seizures after it received complaints that the product had broken in the mouths of infants who then swallowed fragments of broken glass and mercury.

A branch spokesman said about 4,000 of the devices, called Thermo Bec, have been manufactured by Sotherme Ltee of Quebec and that most of those have been distributed in Montreal and the Lac St. Jean region.

Although the devices are also patented in the United States, the spokesman could not say if they are sold there.

Physicians do not recommend the use of oral clinical thermometers for infants, and persons possessing the devices are advised to return them to the place of purchase, the statement said.

New Editions Herald Hotter Newspaper War

MONTREAL (UPC) — The city's English-language newspaper war has heated up with both dailies announcing they will launch new editions to capture the other's morning and afternoon monopoly markets.

The morning Gazette announced Friday it will begin publishing an afternoon Gazette PM Monday, and less than six hours later it's only rival, The Montreal Star, responded with the announced launching of a morning edition to be on the stands at 7 a.m. the same day.

The rivalry accelerated last week when the Star, strike-bound for eight months, announced it was returning to the streets with full intentions to regain lost circulation.

As the only English paper in Montreal during the strike, The Gazette almost doubled its daily circulation from 112,000 to 200,000.

The Star's return has sparked an advertising and circulation campaign. Flyers and radio spots announce "The best news is the Star is back" and the Gazette is pushing a "G for good morning, G for the Gazette" advertising jingle.

Star publisher William Goodson said the paper had regained almost all it's 165,000 pre-strike circulation.

Both Goodson and Robert McConnell, assistant publisher at the Gazette, Canada's oldest newspaper, said they weren't surprised by the back-to-back moves.

McConnell said the Gazette's move was prompted by market studies that showed people were buying the paper in mid-afternoon and evening, and admitted the extra edition was possible because of the paper's increased revenue during the Star strike.

Franklin Decision Based on Jobless

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — The Canadian Coast Guard icebreaker Franklin, being built at Vancouver, will be based at St. John's, Nfld., it was announced here today.

The decision announced by Transport Minister Otto Lang seemed sure to bring a howl of protest from those who had wanted the new vessel based at Dartmouth, N.S.

Planning for several years had been to base the Franklin at Dartmouth and several key members of her crew, from Dartmouth, were on the west coast being trained in running the ship.

Vancouver-Toronto Cheapies Set

TORONTO (CP) — Suntours Ltd. of Toronto has announced return charter air fares between Toronto and Vancouver ranging between $199 and $219 this summer.

Those prices compare with the $402 economy fare and $232 Nighthawk and charter class fares offered by Air Canada and CP Air on scheduled flights for the period. Air Canada and CP Air have asked the Canadian transport commission to approve a five-per-cent average fare increase on domestic flights.

Suntours, which started a price war last month on transatlantic fares, says its domestic fare structure is the lowest for in-Canada charter flights.

Flights will operate on weekends between most Canadian cities and must be booked at least 30 days in advance.

Fares between Toronto and the Atlantic Provinces will start at $109.

Dennis Gill, Suntours president, said the scheduled airlines' request for a five-per-cent increase on domestic fares follows their reduction of transatlantic fares by up to 35 per cent.

He said the company is entering the domestic market because of Canada's chronically high international travel deficit.

"It is essential for Canada's largest tour operator to show the way in an effort to persuade Canadians to see their own country first," Gill said.

A total of about 30,000 seats will be available for the Suntours weekend flights during the peak holiday period of July and August.

John Davies is helping us find something that took 300 years to lose.

Every year in B.C., hundreds of artifacts are discovered and sent to the B.C. Provincial Museum in Victoria.

Unfortunately, because many of the pieces have been lost or neglected for hundreds of years, they need careful cleaning and restoration to bring them back to life.

That's the job of people like John Davies—a technician with the museum's Conservation Division. To him an artifact isn't just another Indian mask—it's a tangible part of our past that must be carefully pieced together and preserved to help show us where we've been. And help tell us where we're going.

John Davies is only one of the more than 43,000 members of the B.C. Government Employees' Union working for you all over the Province.

At all kinds of jobs.

Under all kinds of working conditions.

All people whose skill, experience and dedication have made our provincial public employees among the most efficient anywhere in North America today. And that's something to be proud of.

The B.C. Government Employees' Union
We're working for you.

PM Backs Off SIN Debate

TORONTO (CP) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau says the federal government sees little need to establish regulations to prohibit private industry from demanding the disclosure of social insurance numbers.

In a letter, Trudeau told Dennis McDermott, president of the Canadian Labor Congress, that the issue should be resolved through private negotiation between the parties involved and not through government intervention.

Trudeau was responding to a written request from McDermott for government action to prevent the widespread use of social insurance numbers by private industry.

"SIN holders are free to keep secret their numbers from whomever they choose, except where there is a requirement in law for disclosure, and those requesting the numbers are likewise at liberty to refuse to do business with those who prefer not to reveal their SINs," Trudeau's letter said.

The issue has become the subject of arbitration proceedings in Peterborough, Ont., involving Canadian General Electric Co. Ltd. and the United Electrical Workers union, Local 542.

The grievance says the company has violated the collective agreement by instituting a new rule requiring employees to wear identification badges bearing their social insurance numbers.

Since the proceedings were initiated, the company has agreed not to make its employees wear the badges with their numbers.

But union spokesmen say they are not satisfied with General Electric's decision.

In his letter to Trudeau, McDermott said that when private companies demand social insurance numbers for identification, despite earlier government assurance that this would not happen, the action "becomes an unjustifiable violation of the citizen's right to privacy, as well as an act of bad faith by the government."

Atlantic Premiers Sign Energy Pact

DARTMOUTH, N.S. (CP) — Federal Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie and the three Maritime premiers signed a memorandum of understanding Friday on the establishment of a Maritime Energy Corp. (MEC) to undertake the marketing of energy in the region and the construction of major power projects.

Gillespie and the premiers of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island described the agreement as historic and complicated and declined to disclose details until it is tabled Monday in the Commons.

Gillespie said the corporation would require some "big money" but he was not prepared to say how much or how it would be raised.

He hoped the corporation would be in operation in a few months with the federal government taking a minority equity position and the Maritime provinces a majority equity position. Financing would be on a project basis.

Sale Of PWA Pledged

EDMONTON (CP) — A Social Credit government would sell Pacific Western Airlines back to private interests and divest all government equity in the $2.2 billion Syncrude Canada Ltd. project near Fort McMurray, party Leader Bob Clark said today.

Clark told a news conference announcing the official start of his party's election campaign that he would also make the Alberta Energy Company's (AEC) $75 million worth of shares available to provincial residents through treasury branches and credit unions within two years of forming a government. The money would have to remain in Alberta.

He said he would sell the government share of the AEC, now 50-per-cent owned by the Lougheed government, within two years of his party's forming a government.

The provincial opposition leader in the last legislature also said a Social Credit government would not consider equity participation in any other oil sands plants.

Tantrum Raised Over Flag

QUEBEC (CP) — A missing Quebec flag almost threw a monkey wrench into the official opening of a new industrial park in suburban St. Augustin Friday.

Communications Minister Louis O'Neill refused to speak unless a fleur-de-lis banner was found to hang beside the Canadian maple leaf and the municipal flag.

Quebec Urban Community officials hurriedly borrowed one from the flag pole outside a nearby construction company office.

Youth Held In Shooting

HALIFAX (CP) — City police took an 11-year-old boy into custody Friday night following a shooting incident in a suburban area in the city's west end that sent another boy to hospital for treatment of a gunshot wound.

Police say the boy in hospital, believed to be about 14 years old, apparently was shot with a .22-calibre rifle.

Celebration in St. Saviour's

A rare opportunity to recapture the mood and musical worship of a classical era.

That is the way Father Walter Donald describes the special 10 a.m. service to be held at St.Saviour's Anglican Church Sunday.

"Everyone who appreciates beautiful music and the richness of Anglican tradition will enjoy this unique opportunity to worship in this special atmosphere," says Father Donald. The event is being called "A Heritage Celebration in a Heritage Setting."

Four of Victoria's leading young musicians will offer an experience which revives the finest traditions in English liturgy and worship. They are violinists Mark Neumann and David Lowe, Rick Westmacott, viola, and Gerry Morin, cello. As well as participating in the hymns, the quartet will play a Mozart composition.

St.Saviour's organist and choirmaster, Ian Westmacott, says that during the singing of the hymns, he will stop the organ accompaniment at intervals, to allow the sound of the strings to be heard.

Father Donald, in collaboration with Westmacott, plans to have these musical celebrations occur on the third Sunday of each month, using local musicians.

The Victoria Conservatory and its affiliates are co-operating but any musician or group interested in participating will be welcome says Father Donald

St.Saviour's Church is located at Catherine and Henry Streets in Victoria West, just north of the first traffic light, east of Johnson Street bridge.

Peru Quake Topples Houses

AREQUIPA, Peru (AP) — Residents on both sides of the Andean mountain border between Peru and Chile were digging out today after an earthquake killed at least five persons and injured hundreds.

The quake struck Friday morning, toppling hundreds of mud-brick houses in this Peruvian city and dozens of isolated mountain hamlets on both sides of the frontier. It also cut power and phone lines and touched off landslides that trapped two buses for several hours on the Pan American Highway.

The Peruvian Institute of Geophysics in Lima said the quake measured 6.2 on the Richter scale, a rating generally strong enough to cause severe damage in heavily populated areas.

At least 14 aftershocks were recorded after the first 45-second jolt and seismologists in this Andean city predicted more tremors.

The heaviest damage in Arequipa, Peru's second-largest city, was in the slums where 250 to 300 houses collapsed.

West produces own evangelist

Canada's west has been developing its own energetic identity in recent years. It is understandable, therefore, that its Christian community has produced a uniquely western evangelist.

The human person is an intelligent being, unwilling to accept any religion or philosophy without question, in the view of Dr. Terry Winter. With that in mind, the Vancouver-based evangelist has made it his concern to present Christianity as a viable option for the thinking person.

Winter, who holds a doctorate in theology, has conducted many crusades in western Canada since 1970. He also hosts a weekly television program, The Terry Winter Show, on which he interviews a variety of theological thinkers. His Sunday afternoon show is viewed by 50,000 to 100,000 people each week.

Questions of theology, philosophy, morality and ethics are explored, both in the crusades and on the television program. Answers are reasoned out without taking away from the simplicity of Christ's gospel.

Winter describes Christ as one who came into the world as a sacrifice for sin and to re-establish the relationship of a human person to God, and a Christian as one who has realized who Jesus Christ is.

Winter has written a book explaining these concepts, Why I am a Christian, published in 1978.

Winter, born in New Westminster 36 years ago, grew up in Nanaimo, and as a high school student of 17 he encountered the meaning of Christianity at an evangelistic crusade similar to the ones he conducts.

Following education at the University of British Columbia, Winter attended seminary in California, where he received his doctorate in 1968.

The next year the Terry Winter Christian Communications Association was formed. Crusades were planned and carried out with response from thousands, and in late 1975 the first television program was aired. In crusades and television shows the evangelist focuses on a variety of current topics, relating them to his belief in Christ as savior.

In each show there is a narrative about someone who has become a Christian. Winter concludes by directly inviting viewers to do the same.

He sees his ministry as an extension of the church, and employs the local churches in organizing crusades and doing follow-up work.

Terry Winter Christian Communications involves 50 people, all of whom are volunteers except Winter, the newly appointed development director, Ernie Bromley and two secretaries.

Winter is paid a schoolteacher's salary to produce the television show, and receives nothing extra for crusades.

Historic St. John's church in Colwood

Amid flowers and stars concern felt for needy

St. John the Baptist Anglican Church, Colwood, is an historic building in an idyllic setting, where soon the blue camas and shooting stars will cover even the parking lot

But while the people of St. John's and its sister church, St. Matthew's, Langford, are ever mindful of God's goodness to them they are conscious also of others less fortunate.

"Loving our neighbor surely must mean sharing his concerns," says Audrey Stickle, parish representative on the Victoria Inter-Church Committee for World Development Education. "And if those concerns include living in a state of poverty or injustice, then our love must inevitably lead to doing something about those conditions."

During the winter, an evening study group in the parish discussed Kenneth Bolton's new book, Wake Up My People. This spring, a series of events is planned commencing Sunday, with the slide-tape presentation, Guess Who's Coming for Breakfast which links our breakfast tables with the people of the Dominican Republic.

Sunday, March 4, the guest preacher at the 10 a.m. service will be the Rev. Trefor Williams who will tell about the Upper Room mission which serves Victoria's people in need. That evening at 7:30 p.m. a film, The Carpenter, will be shown, which illustrates some of the work done by the church of the Holy Carpenter in Hong Kong, supported in part by the Primate's World Relief and Development Fund, to bring about a just and humane society.

On Sunday, March 18, one of the Nishga Tribal Council members will speak at the 10 a.m. service about Canada's native people and their call for justice. That evening, Doreen and Roy Hodges of Central Baptist church will show slides of their work in Nigeria.

Further events are planned for April, culminating in a deanery pageant at St. Martin's-in-the-Fields on Sunday, April 29.

"While we are extending a special invitation to other churches in the western community to join us for these sessions, a sincere welcome goes out to anyone interested in coming," says Rev. Joe Titus, rector.

The evening events will be at 7:30 p.m. in St. John the Baptist Church Hall, Glencairn Road, Colwood.

Exiled journalist peace group guest

Exiled Chilean journalist and social worker Gabriela Videla will speak on The New Economic Order at Tuesday night's supper meeting of the Inter-church Ten Days for World Development group.

The topic is an explanation of what Third World countries want from the developed world in the next few years.

Born in Santiago in 1935 to working class parents, Mrs. Videla was determined to receive an education, graduating from the University of Chile in journalism.

She was professor at the Catholic University school of social work until 1971 when she became director of social development for Northern Santiago in the government of Salvador Allende.

Mrs. Videla

Exiled to Mexico in 1973, she became a team member at the Cuernavaca Centre for Inter-cultural Dialogue on Development. She works primarily with women in a squatters' settlement of 5,000 people. As a wife and mother, she knows their problems in carrying on their struggle against oppression. Now in Lagunilla settlement they have built a school and after two years of persuasion, the government has provided a teacher.

She founded the monthly Mexican magazine, Maria—Liberation del Pueblo, which she edits, as well as a weekly newspaper.

St. Patrick's parish is supper host and through its development and peace group invites concerned people of all faiths and non-faiths to attend at St. Patrick's school gymnasium, 2368 Trent, (off Fort) Tuesday at 6 p.m. Voluntary offering if desired.

Phone 592-7851 or 592-1920 if planning to attend.

$5,000 gift cause for thanksgiving

St. Christopher's Anglican Church will hold a debt-free thanksgiving service at 9:30 a.m. Sunday, marking the end of a 21-year struggle to pay off its indebtedness.

Through the kindness of a former parishioner, a gift of $5,000 has brought St. Christopher's on Carey Road past its recent troubles to solvency and independence.

A year ago, this troubled congregation was faced with seeking denominational help. Today, St. Christopher's has been enabled to pay off its arrears on project assessments, the remaining debt of $1,300 on the parish hall, with sufficient funds left over for a complete reroofing.

To St. Christopher's this is cause for thanksgiving to God, because the help came as a real godsend which will be celebrated in a special eucharist.

Former friends of St. Christopher's invited will include Canon and Mrs. Willis, instrumental in the building of the dual purpose church-hall in 1958. It was the canon's vision that the people of the North Douglas-Sevenoaks district should have facilities in their own community.

All friends of St. Christopher's are invited to join in the festive service.

The present rector, who succeeded Canon Willis in 1968, is Rev. Peter Isles.

Perspectives

By Rev. J. A. Davidson

Sigmund Freud, whose probings into our innermost nature revolutionized our understanding of ourselves, died in 1939 from cancer of the jaw. He had suffered from this affliction for 16 years and had undergone 33 operations.

He faced his suffering courageously, but, as one of his American followers, Lionel Trilling, wrote, "He had, of course, no religious faith to help him confront the gratuitousness of his suffering." The Judaism of Freud's fathers might have helped him in his suffering, but he did not avail himself of its resources.

Much human suffering is indeed gratuitous—inexplicable, undeserved, utterly mysterious. The gratuitousness of suffering is a great obstacle to faith in the Judeo-Christian tradition. How can we believe that God is just and merciful and loving when he allows men and women and children to suffer so much?

Some of our suffering is punitive—that is, punishment for our failure to take proper care of ourselves or punishment for our misconduct. As St. Paul put it in his letter to the Galatians, "Make no mistake about this: God is not to be fooled; a man reaps what he sows." Sometimes we do reap harvests of suffering—and there often is little mystery about this kind of suffering.

Some suffering may be seen to be remedial—tempering the will and strengthening the character. But here we can fall into a terrible complacency, especially when we are not the sufferers said to be helped by suffering.

Some persons are helped by their suffering to deeper sympathy and compassion than they would have had they not suffered. But some suffering damages character and personality, seriously injuring the sufferer at the very depths of his or her being. Suffering may teach a person to pray to God with hope and even with thanksgiving. And suffering may teach a person to curse God or to deny that God exists.

The intellectual resolving of the mystery of suffering is quite beyond us. Biblical faith cannot explain the gratuitousness of suffering. But biblical faith can point the way through suffering to where it is not destructive of one's personhood. Baron von Hugel, a Roman Catholic lay theologian of two or three generations ago, put the matter in this way: "Christianity does not explain suffering; it shows us what to do with it."

We must not be so insensitive as to say that suffering is punitive or can be remedial if we are not at the same time willing to help sufferers realize that we do care very deeply about their suffering. The word "compassion" means, quite literally, "suffering with". The answer of faith to the mystery of suffering is not in theory or speculation but in compassion, the compassion of a caring community.

With some sufferers it is not simply their suffering that leads them into despair, but their suffering in loneliness, in their feeling that no one else really cares. The "answer", then, to the gratuitousness of suffering, to the intimidating mystery of suffering, is in the compassionate, caring community. We who belong to a community of faith are called to minister to one another's suffering.

Before the Judge

A 38-year-old Oak Bay man was given a suspended sentence and six months' probation after pleading guilty Friday in Victoria provincial court to fracturing a man's arm at a dance.

David Maxwell Holland, of 2830 Musgrave, pleaded guilty to a charge of assault causing bodily harm to Grahame Quackenbush.

Crown counsel Robert Mulligan told the court Holland was attending a Royal Jubilee Hospital staff dance Oct. 14 at the Senior Citizens Centre at 1442 Monterey when he went into a washroom, spoke to Quackenbush, and struck him, fracturing his forearm.

Defence lawyer Fiona Gow, asking Judge William Ostler for a conditional discharge, said on the night of the incident, Holland had six double ryes, saw Quackenbush and felt a strong dislike for him.

She said Holland doesn't know why he did what he did and has not had a drink since that night. She also told the court Holland phoned Quackenbush and apologized.

In rejecting the suggestion, Ostler said it was a serious assault and not an appropriate case for a discharge.

Ostler fined a 34-year-old man $50 for assault after hearing a rather unique set of circumstances.

Thomas Howells, formerly of 7120 Hagan, pleaded guilty to assaulting 28-year-old Geoffrey Bennun in a July 4 incident at the Empress Hotel.

Mulligan said Howells was an employee at the hotel while Bennun was the food and beverage manager there. He said Howells struck Bennun, causing a black eye and chipped teeth, after been told to "punch out and go home."

Howells said he was working during the Smile Show and thought he was hassling show patrons during the performance by pushing food and drink at them when they wanted to see the show. But each time he informed Bennun, Howells told the court, the manager would order him back to asking patrons if they wanted anything.

Following a number of exchanges and a final refusal by Howells to serve food and drinks, Howells said, the assault took place.

Howells also told the court the kitchen staff sent him a thank-you note 20 minutes after the incident.

An 18-year-old was sentenced to 10 days in jail after pleading guilty to his second breach of probation in less than a year.

Stanley Steven West, of 1736 Duchess, was given the jail term after changing an earlier plea to guilty.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang said West was convicted March 30, 1978, of theft under $200 and was given a suspended sentence, nine months probation, and was ordered to obey a 10:30 p.m. curfew during his probation period.

Lang said West's mother reported that West was out all night July 28, out until 4 a.m. Aug. 1 and out until midnight Aug. 2.

Lang also said that West was convicted of probation breach May 18, 1978, when he was given a five-day jail sentence. West was also convicted of breaking and entering Sept. 25, 1978, and was sentenced to three months in jail and of possession of stolen property May 10, 1978, when he was handed a two-month jail sentence and placed on one year's probation.

Defence lawyer Robert Adair said West had been having difficulties with his parents at the time of the latest breaches.

Ostler ordered a pre-sentence report for a 17-year-old who pleaded guilty to three counts of fraud.

Mark Stanley, 497 Old Island Highway, was released on his own recognizance in the sum of $500 and remanded until March 8 for sentencing.

Mulligan said Stanley went to Eaton's on Jan. 25 and purchased a television set and remote control unit valued at $661.45 and two pairs of pants valued at $54.50, paying for all items by cheque.

In addition, Mulligan continued, Stanley also paid for $56.28 worth of groceries from Shopeasy, 1913 Sooke Road, by cheque.

Court was informed that Stanley opened an account at the Douglas Street branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce on Jan. 25 with a $1 deposit using a fictitous name and address.

A 29-year-old Sidney man was fined $50 for the careless storage of firearms.

John Angus McPhail pleaded guilty to the charge which arose from an Aug. 12 incident.

Mulligan said Sidney RCMP were called to a domestic dispute at McPhail's residence and found a shotgun as well as other weapons in the house.

The Winchester 12-gauge shotgun, Mulligan said, was found in a closet with four live rounds of ammunition in it.

Fined for drinkinng-driving offences were: Douglas James Nixon, 39, of 155 Gorge Road East, $500; and Robert Michael Orr, 20, of 2644 Prior, $50.

The ministry said the group will include teachers and counsellors, school administrators, law enforcement personnel and representatives from the clergy, labor and business.

She said object of the committee is to establish counselling objectives in secondary schools and determine the relative importance of career, education and personal counselling.

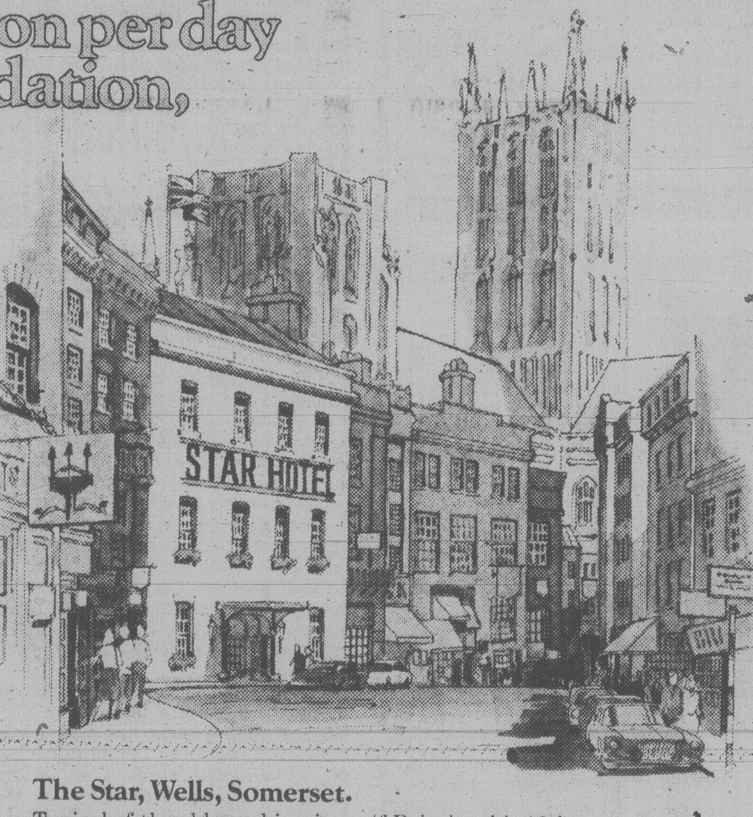
Best of all, Air Canada knows scores of lovely country inns and hotels, all over Britain and all approved by the British Tourist Authority. Their room prices all include the fabulous British breakfast.

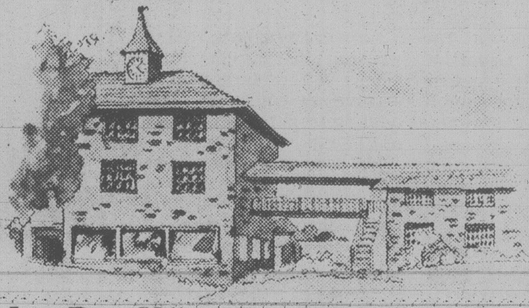
And with Air Canada prepaid vouchers, your accommodation is guaranteed at very short notice.

Here are five inns, typical of the delightful Air Canada choices. For a trip to Britain that you will remember happily ever after.



The Star, Wells, Somerset.
Typical of the old coaching inns of Britain, this 16th century charmer still boasts a cobbled carriageway. It stands within sight of Wells Cathedral, one of the most magnificent in Britain; and is near splendid scenic walks and views.

Invercauld Arms, Braemar, Scotland.
A Deeside village famous for its beauty, and over 1,000 feet up in the bracing Highland air, houses this roomy and comfortable family hotel. Nearby places of great interest include Braemar and Balmoral Castles.



Last Drop Village, Bromley Cross, Lancashire.
A complete village, lovingly created from old moorland cottages. Includes a charming hotel, pub, cozy tea shop...and of course cobbled streets for strolling. Unique, certainly; but only one of many uniquely charming inns in Britain.

St Brides Hotel, Saundersfoot, Wales.
In the sunny southwest of Wales, the scenery is gentle and the sea-views spectacular. One of the best is seen from the delightful, and typically Welsh, St Brides Hotel.

The Raven, Droitwich, Hereford & Worcestershire.
Half-timbered Elizabethan manor house converted into a comfy hotel, in an elegant spa town featuring a lively market and some celebrated natural-brine spa baths. Situated in one of England's loveliest Counties.

Getting there.
Air Canada flies to Britain nearly every day. And our schedules allow come-and-go flexibility, with charter class fares from $399 from Vancouver. (Call Air Canada or your travel agent for advance purchase details.)
Free copies of Air Canada's "Inn Britain" programme and BTA's "Britain, a Land to Explore" are available at your travel agent. Useful and reasonably-priced accommodation guides and tour planners are available through any Classic, Coles or W.H. Smith bookstore.

Getting about.
Thanks to Britain's compactness and its well-marked roads, getting about in your rental car is easy as well as economical.
Or ask about our modestly priced Britrail pass. Both give you unlimited mileage.

As Mom Shops, Tots Learn

family

By SHARON JOHNSON
New York Times

Like many mothers of pre-school children, Justine Smith, a San Diego housewife, dreaded shopping. Every time he took her three-year-old son Jason along, he fussed so much that she had no choice but to return home with many of her errands undone.

Today shopping is fun for both of them, because while his mother shops, Jason attends the Activity Centre for Children in the University Towne Centre, a 130-store complex in San Diego. The Activity Centre, the first of its kind in the U.S., is a pioneering effort to provide children with learning experiences on a short-term basis which are usually provided in a full-time preschool program.

Palo Alto Educational Systems, a profit-making organization that operates 24 pre-schools in the West, designed the centre for children two-and-a-half to eight-years-old who need something interesting to do for one to three hours while their parents are away. The centre is open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. Monday through Saturday.

The cost is $2 for the first hour and $1.50 for each hour thereafter. Several shops pay part of the fee if the parents make a purchase.

After being screened by a licensed vocational nurse to make sure that they don't have colds or other physical problems, the children enter the centre, which is divided into six areas.

In the arts area, they paint, weave, tie-dye and draw, while in the reading readiness area they listen to stories.

In the games area, they complete puzzles, and in the woodworking section they make everything from birdhouses to plaques.

In the make-believe area, they dress up in costumes and act out plays, and in the movie area they watch abbreviated versions of Disney classics as well as films about science and nature.

Outside, they play on the suspension bridge or race tricycles along the Little Le Mans course.

"We want each child to go home with something — an idea, a skill or an interest — he didn't have before," said Mary Vandenbosch, the centre's director, who grew up in Troy, N.Y. "The centre is designed so that the children can come in at any time and can work independently or in groups."

A three-year-old, for example, may spend 10 minutes listening to a story, 15 minutes watching a movie and 20 minutes painting. Two eight-year-olds, who arrived sometime later, may spend an hour in the working area and a half-hour putting on a play; it all depends on their interests.

The staff works with each child to determine activities appropriate to his age and ability. The activities are changed constantly so that no matter how many times a child comes to the centre there is always something new.

"My three-and-a-half-year-old daughter and my six-year-old son would not mind going to the centre every day because they think of it as their own special place," said Patty Castellanos of San Diego. "It is much better than employing a babysitter because the staff takes an interest in the children. They don't prop the children up in front of a television set the way so many babysitters do."

Besides the director and assistant director, there are 10 teachers, all of whom meet state requirements for pre-school teaching. Some of the teachers are on call, because the attendance varies widely. About 20 children a day attend the centre, which opened in August.

Some parents, like Trish Hannan of San Diego, take their children to the activity centre even on days they don't shop.

"I think the centre is very good for only-children like my three-year-old son because it enables them to meet other kids," said Mrs. Hannan.

◀ ACTIVITY Centre in San Diego shopping centre is a pioneering effort to provide children with the same sort of learning experiences on a short term basis as are usually provided in a full-time preschool program. At left, children dress up for their own play, while below, the sun shines brightly on an outdoor play area.

Dresses Back in Fashion

NEW YORK (AP) — The office dress, the glamor dress, the suit-dress topped by a jacket, the golden-oldie movie star dress — the dress, in its infinite variety, is back in fashion for spring, fashion experts agree.

New silhouettes, brighter colors and luxurious-looking fabrics all make the new dresses wearable and more exciting than ever, they point out.

But many North American women, after years of "separates dressing," are unaccustomed to shopping for a dress at all, and selecting a dress that's fashionable and flattering may present a bit of a problem, say the fashion experts at the Fibre Information Centre.

It's really quite easy, they add.

A dress can be one of the most figure-flattering of garments in a woman's wardrobe.

— A dress can hide a multitude of figure problems. Its one-piece, one-color look can minimize bulges and add a look of length to the body. This spring's dresses will be pared down to a leaner, more wearable shape and line.

— Prepare yourself for your first dress-shopping expedition by checking a variety of fashion magazines of trend information.

— Wider shoulders will be a fashion note this spring. Either with padding or by using tucks at the shoulder, most designers will emphasize the shoulders.

— Check the fabric-care labels when you shop. Many luxurious-looking fabrics are actually made from easy-care, man-made fibres.

— Hemlines will go shorter for spring, especially in designer lines.

— Choose clearer, truer colors this season. The muted neutrals of last spring and summer will be replaced by flattering pastels.

— Fabrics will be a little crisper than the floppy, rumpled looks of last year.

WHEN WIPING OFF GLAZE, WIPE AREAS MOST PRONE TO WEAR THE CLEANEST. LEAVE SOME GLAZE AT INSIDE CORNERS, AROUND PULLS AND OTHER HARDWARE, AND IN THE VALLEYS OF CARVINGS AND OTHER RELIEVED SURFACES.

'Tarnishing' With Age

By A.J. HAND

One of the simplest and most effective finishes you can put on a piece of flea market furniture is the antiqued or glazed finish.

It consists of a coat or two of enamel, usually light in color. Over this goes a coat of "glaze" or semi-transparent paint in a darker color, most of which is then wiped off. Result: a paint finish that appears to have "tarnished" with age.

Done correctly, on the right piece of furniture, the finish can be quite striking. A good candidate for antiquing should have some surface relief in the form of carvings, moldings or turnings.

When the glaze is wiped from these relieved areas, the dark color tends to remain in the low spots, and be wiped completely clean from the high spots.

The high spots thus appear to have been polished by years of wear while the low spots seem to have a mellow patina.

If you try this finish on a basically flat, featureless piece of furniture it will simply look dirty and since it is an opaque finish, it's foolish to use it on a piece of furniture built with fine hardwoods such as walnut, mahogany, or cherry. These woods deserve a natural finish such as varnish.

HOW TO ANTIQUE. Antiqued finishes are fun and easy to apply. Since they are opaque, you can apply them right over the existing finish. This eliminates stripping, the tedious part of refinishing. Just make sure the piece to be finished is clean. Scrub it with detergent and warm water, then rinse. Avoid overwetting the piece, however, or you may loosen old veneers or glue joints.

Give the whole piece a light sanding with No. 220 sandpaper. Then brush off the dust and you are ready to start. You can buy special antiquing or glazing kits, consisting of a colored base coat, glaze, and usually some cheesecloth for wiping.

You can also make up your own. Buy a good semi-gloss enamel in the color of your choice for the base coat. Whites and off-whites are popular, but I have seen bright reds and blues antiqued effectively, too. Early American colors also are good.

Glazes are usually brownish. You can buy a glaze in the color of your choice, or make some up by mixing oil-base artist's paint or tinting pigment into some ordinary varnish. Use just enough pigment to achieve a dark but not fully opaque glaze.

The base coat goes on like any coat of enamel. Brush it on as smoothly as possible. Let it dry, then sand lightly with No. 220 sandpaper and put on another coat. When that coat is completely dry, go over it with fine steel wool. This will give it a smoother, slightly worn look.

Now you can apply the glaze. Brush it on any old way. There's no need to do a neat job, just be sure to avoid bare spots. Let the glaze set for awhile. Around 10 minutes will do fine. Then take a clean rag and begin wiping the glaze off.

Don't try to remove it all. Imagine that you are the hand of time. Wipe the most completely where natural wear would occur.

Concentrate on the high spots of any relieved areas, on sharp edges and outside corners, and the areas near the centre of broad surfaces. Let the glaze remain in nooks and crannies, around inside corners, wherever the piece of furniture would have been least prone to wear.

Evaluate your work as you wipe. If the glaze comes off too cleanly, let it set up a bit longer. If it is sticky and difficult to remove, dampen your rag wih a bit of turpentine or paint thinner.

Keep at it, brushing on a bit more glaze if necessary to get the desired effect. When you are satisfied, let the glaze dry for a day. Some refinishers go over the whole piece with a protective coat of varnish, but I have never found that extra step necessary.

More than eight per cent of Canada's population is over 65 years old. If you are not there yet and live long enough, you, too, will eventually be considered elderly or even old.

The four-page folder The crisis of 65 stresses that compulsory retirement at age 65 is not in everybody's interest. Those who are put on the shelf while they are still able to work should keep themselves busy with voluntary activities.

Of course, everybody should prepare themselves for retirement long before that day comes.

There is no doubt, that our life beyond 65 will change. However, the change need not be painful, if everybody tries to improve the environment for the elderly.

The folder urges younger people to make it possible for the elderly to contribute their knowledge and skills to the community.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: Our daughter, Karla, is 20, and Bill, her boyfriend, is 22. They've gone together for nearly two years and have just announced that they plan to live together for about a year. Then, if they are compatible, they'll get married.

Bill's parents seem to approve of this, but I do not. I think it's immoral and that they would be living in sin. My husband doesn't really approve of the idea, but says if it doesn't work out it will be easier on Karla than a divorce.

Abby, I say if Karla and Bill love each other and want to live together they should get married now! Karla is the youngest of three daughters. Her sisters both had beautiful church weddings without any "compatibility tests" beforehand, and they are happily married. I promised Karla a lovely church wedding, too, but told her if she lives with Bill for a year, a wedding would be a mockery, and not to expect us to give her one. Am I wrong to feel this way? MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: You are entitled to feel any way you wish, but children who are of age (and self-supporting) have a right to determine their own lifestyles. If you believe a church wedding would be a mockery, it's your right to refuse to foot the bill for one.

DEAR ABBY: Someone asked you whose name should be listed first, the man's or woman's, when couples sign something. You said "Ladies first," but I think the reverse is true.

I've made a list of some famous couples, and found many more in which the man's name comes first. Examples:

Adam and Eve
Romeo and Juliet
Napoleon and Josephine
Donny and Marie
Anthony and Cleopatra
William and Mary (the college)
Punch and Judy
Burns and Allen
Jack and Jill

On the other hand, I could come up with very few famous couples in which the woman's name is mentioned first.

Namely:

Bonnie and Clyde
Frankie and Johnny
Maggie and Jiggs

How come? ED

DEAR ED: When you're right, you're right. Beats me. Readers?

KNIT AND CHAT

Why Not a Burger As a Child's Chair?

By MAY E. MacLEAN

I've just recently returned from a trade show for art needlework which was held in New York city. There were 204 exhibitors displaying needlepoint, knitting and crochet, embroidery, smocking, quilt making, rug making as well as allied crafts. It occupied three floors of the Statler Hilton Hotel and was the largest exhibition to date.

It seemed that every conceivable idea and subject had been worked in needlepoint which is extremely popular in the U.S. these days. Rug hooking is fast growing in popularity and there are kits available here in Canada where you can purchase them one at a time and add a square, thereby making the rug to your individual requirements. I think this is a terrific idea, and certainly easy on the budget.

Another idea which I thought unique and which could be copied quite easily was a child's floor cushion made from fabric in the shape of an oversized hamburger. It was very realistic in appearance and one could almost imagine it being assembled: one flat cushion type pad as the bottom of the hamburger bun, then another pad for the meat part along with smaller pads representing the relishes and tomatoes, topped off with the rounded top part of the bun.

I would say it was about 15 inches high and about 20 inches across if you have the materials on hand and would like to try your hand at making one. I know the small fry would love one and they would be a conversation piece to say the least in the family room.

I've had a letter from a lady asking how to braid with four strands instead of the regular three. Really, when you know how it's quite simple, but I'm afraid without diagrams it might not be that easy.

However, when I was much younger and learning craft work, we learned to braid or plait with several strands, and the one rule of thumb that stuck with me was always take the outside strand over the strand next to it, then under and over the other strands. It just needs a litle practice to get used to.

Surely you know someone who would appreciate a tea-cosy? These are old time favorites and quick to make, one knit the other crochet, and both can no doubt be made from oddments of double knitting weight that you have on hand.

To order Leaflet No. 1278 send 75 cents along with a stamped self addressed return envelope, long one if possible. If you do not have a stamp or envelope, please enclose an extra 25 cents to cover the cost of handling and print your name and address. Send to: — May E. MacLean, "KNIT & CHAT" c/o 486 Montford Drive, Dollard des Ormeaux, Roxboro, Qué.

Please be sure to state pattern numbers correctly when ordering and to enclose your stamped return envelope for faster service. Allow about two weeks for normal delivery. All back numbers of my series are available, price 75 cents each, catalogue 25 cents, along with a stamped return envelope.

PARENT TEST URGED

TORONTO (CP) — All new and expectant parents should be screened to determine whether they are suitable to raise children, says a prominent Toronto doctor.

Dr. Robert Bates, director of the child-abuse program at Toronto's Hospital for Sick Children, says mandatory screening clinics to determine how well a person can care for a child should be required whenever a child has been born.

Speaking at a workshop on child abuse, Dr. Bates said some cases might only require discussions between a doctor and an expectant parent. Other cases might need the involvement of a psychiatrist or a social worker.

"Too many people think this is an infringement of parents' rights," he said. "Well, to hell with that. The parents who get upset about high-risk screening clinics are the ones we have to look more closely at."

He also suggested nurses in delivery rooms and maternity wards be asked to make written notes on matters such as how a mother holds a newborn baby in an effort to weed out potential child abusers.

Dr. Bates said those notes could then be passed on to a hospital committee which would determine whether infants would be in jeopardy when they go home with their parents.

He also recommended that community-health nurses visit homes of newborns and that baby bonus cheques only be sent to parents who have attended prenatal clinics.

Bates later criticized the current child-welfare system as too often dealing with child abusers after a case of abuse has been reported.

"Too many of our child-welfare systems are crisis-oriented," he said in an interview. "And if it's crisis-oriented, we've missed the boat."

HAMSTER'S DUMBER THAN AVERAGE RAT

DEAR DR. MILLER: My orother thinks his hamster is smarter but I know my rat is smarter. My brother's not right, is he?

— M. F.

DEAR M. F.: Your brother probably isn't right. Not this time, anyway, at least not unless his hamster is exceptionally smart and/or your rat is retarded a bit. A hamster has a smaller stack of smarts, on the average, than does a rat.

DEAR DR. MILLER: How do you know when a wound is big enough that the doctor has to stitch it up?

— D. D.

DEAR D. D.: If the wound is merely a scrape with a raw, even bleeding, surface which doesn't completely penetrate the skin, then, even though the wound is large, suturing would not be indicated.

An elongated wound which causes a gaping of the skin usually requires stitching particularly if tissue is visible beneath the skin. Smaller wounds, particularly the puncture types, may seem insignificant, yet there may be considerable tissue damage under the skin and there may also be hair or other material driven deep into the tissue at the time of the injury. This will inevitably cause infection unless cleaned out. Hence, the need for sutering is not the only reason to have wounds checked by the doctor; but most wounds which actually penetrate the skin should be, since the majority of them will cause problems when left untreated.

DEAR DR. MILLER: If you please, what consitutes a good shipping crate for a cat?

— J. E.

DEAR J. E.: A cat shipping crate may be heavier than a regular cat carrier (it needs to be strong enough to prevent crushing).

It needs to be large enough for the cat to stretch out in, to turn around and to stand. It should provide adequate air circulation but at the same time some draft protection and privacy. There should be no sharp edges or protrusions on the inside of the cage, yet there needs to be provision for food and water pans. There should be a floor pad for comfort and insulation. Finally, the door must fit well and latch securely. Some flight cat carriers designed to fit under the seats may be less than ideal in some respects but the compensations include the fact that the cat thus carried can be close by and be constantly reassured by its owner during the trip.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Priscilla, my goldfish, has this big, whitish-gray fuzzy spot at the base of her tail. It might be a fungus. Can a goldfish with a fungus be saved?

— A. C.

DEAR A. C.: Priscilla possibly can be successfully treated for this fishy fungus, bacterial infection or whatever. Whether treatment is successful or not depends usually on whether it's the proper treatment, started soon enough, and whether the fish is still strong enough to be able to respond. A fish such as poor Priscilla usually becomes obviously ill only because she was already weakened ahead of time. A fish which is well nourished and in a favorable watery environment will seldom become ill unless accidents or old age are involved. Usually, the obvious disease is merely the final blow in a series of minor disasters related to improper water conditions and poor nutrition.

your health

By L. L. Coleman, MD

For some months I've been getting a gnawing pain in my stomach. This happens mostly in the middle of the day. I notice that when I eat the pain seems to become less intense. Are these what are known as "hunger pains"? — Miss B.D.

Dear Miss D.:

The term "hunger pains" has stood up well as an expression of the body's physiological needs. When the stomach is empty, the muscles of the stomach wall have nothing to "contract down on". The gnawing, unpleasant sensation usually described as "hunger pains" can be an important guide to the doctor in the diagnosis of diseases of the esophagus, the stomach or the small intestine.

Hunger pains that are relieved by the intake of food or drink is a meaningful diagnostic guide. Periodic, cyclic pain leaves the doctor to suspect some gastric (stomach) or intestinal disorder. This, then, can be followed up with X-ray studies and other techniques, to confirm the presence or absence of any intrinsic disease. Peptic ulcer of the stomach or the duodenum, hiatus hernia, excess secretion of acid in the stomach or allergic reaction to drugs can all be responsible for persistent and distressing hunger pains. Emotional stress may also play a role in the production and persistence of hunger pains. Excess tobacco, dietary indiscretion, coffee and tea can also be the culprits.

With so many possibilities, anyone who is distressed by these recurrent pains should have them tracked down in order to be certain that there is no serious underlying problem.

NEW YORK (AP) — The number of women directors of corporate boards has increased 550 per cent in the last 10 years, according to Catalyst, an organization that monitors women's career trends. Cyclamen Generic Name

jack beastall

Cyclamen: How shall we sound this mystic name of Greek descent and Persian fame?
Some people use it now and then as if 'twere written "sickly-men;"
But as it comes from "kuklos," Greek, why not kick-laymen, so to speak?
The gardener, with his ready wit, upon another mode has hit;
He's terse and brief — long names dislikes, and so he renders it as "sykes".

(1800s garden periodical)

This question of pronounciation continues today, and the Greek word which started it all means a circle, referring to the manner in which the flower stem coils around the seed vessel and holds it at soil level beneath the protective foilage until the seeds are ripe.

It then uncoils, stretches above the plant, the seed vessel explodes, scattering the seed into fresh soil beyond the roots of the parent plant. In this way colonies of cyclamen soon appear around a single corm of the hardy outdoor varieties.

Until we study plant catalogs and plant encyclopedias, we are inclined to think a name applies only to the one plant with which we are familiar, not realizing it is a generic name, and the genus can include many forms of the same plant.

Thus the name "cyclamen "is usually associated with the indoor potted plant, while the hardy outdoor species are virtually unknown.

The tender species grown as potted plants in northern latitudes is Cyclamen persicum, from Persia. The first plants to reach Europe came from India, so the species was originally known as C. indicum, a name no longer recognized.

Although the florists' cyclamen is seen in flower at any time frm November to May, its natural flowering time is February. It is not wise for the indoor gardener to allow, or to force, flowering at other times, for the greatest display and longer flowering period comes when the plants follow their normal cycle.

Flowers are nipped off as they fade, and the last ones as flowering ceases. If reserves are taken from the corm to produce the useless seed, the number of blooms made the following season will be greatly lessened.

After the last flowers have been removed, cease watering and allow the foilage to turn yellow, then place the pot in a cool place in the basement, out of sunlight, for a rest period until mid- or late July.

Repotting is done after the rest period. The soil mixture is two parts garden loam or compost soil, one part leafmould (screened), and enough coarse sand for excellent drainage. Add charcoal to all soil mixtures for cyclamen.

Put coarse gravel or broken pot (chard) in bottom of pot and the soil mixture on top. The important part of potting is to have the top of the corm level with the rim of the pot, and the soil around it half an inch below the pot rim. This allows space for watering without the water covering the top of the corm and rotting the leaf and flower stems.

Care is necessary in watering. After repotting, water sparingly until growth starts. Increase watering as growth increases, and give abundant water when in full growth and flower.

From September until April the plants need good light but shade from hot sun. The temperature for this period should be from 13 to 16° C. or 55 to 60 ° F. The normal 20 to 22° C. of the average home tends to force out-of-season flowering, weak flower stems and poor foliage. It also causes unnecessary drain of reserves from the corm.

After a number of buds have formed, the judicious use of a nitrogenous fertilizer in liquid form until the plant is in full bloom will keep the corm in good condition for the following year.

The secret of success with indoor cyclamen is:

— Constant unvarying temperature in the range mentioned above;

— Moist atmosphere around the plant;

— Abundant water when in full growth, but never stagnant water in the soil;

— Free air circulation around the plant without draughts of either hot or cold air;

— Good light in winter; shade from hot sun in spring and fall; dormancy from end of April to end of July.

The hardy outdoor species seem to succeed with some gardeners but appear unhappy with others.

Essential to success is the best of drainage, for the corms will not withstand water around them in winter.

After attending to drainage, add grit to the soil in the planting area, some lime, and make it moisture-holding with plenty of humus. Choose a spot in partial shade. Plant the corms below the surface of the soil, shaded from hot sun with a rock outcrop, conifer, or a shrub, and be patient for two years until established.

Cyclamen neapolitanum (from Naples) with rose-pink, carmine-base blooms on four-inch stems, beautifully marbled foliage, and blooming in September-October, roots from the top of the corm as well as from sides and base. Plant deep enough for these top roots to be under soil. The white form is C.n. album.

Cyclamen orbiculatum var. Coum has dark green leaves, carmine flowers in late February through March, on four-inch stems, and roots from the base of the corm so is plante) quite shallow. The white form is album, the rose-pink roseum, both more rarely seen.

There are three other species, one April-May flowering but only hardy in very mild areas, the European cyclamen which is sometimes difficult to find and is not too free flowering in cultivation, and the Cecilian cyclamen, a small gem but not flamboyant, having a definite place in collections of cyclamens.

Outdoor cyclamens are as lovely as the indoor kind, and local gardeners are lucky in being able to grow and enjoy both.

Something for the Young

audrey johnson

When everybody was celebrating what they inevitably hoped would be the turning of a new and better page at midnight last Dec. 31, there was probably little thought given to the special significance that had been bestowed upon the year of 1979.

All over the world this year has been dedicated, according to the official UNICEF proclamation, as the International Year of the Child. Exactly what significance this will have for the millions of children in the depressed areas of the world will be discovered later. But the children of bitter poverty are not the only endangered and troubled ones. Our own affluent society has its plentiful share as well we know.

The concept of the Year of the Child presents a huge canvas, each part of which is flawed in some degree and demands a caring and a mending. None of us can pay attention to all of it. The best we can do is apply what skill we have to what lies within our reach.

But quite apart from the gigantic task of solving the inequities that exist, what should not be overlooked is support for those endeavors within our communities which are soundly constructive.

Look around and discover what is being done that is challenging, mind-expanding; that is developing character and preparing the child and the adolescent to cope with the future. Then give it a boost — maybe by a donation to a scholarship fund.

One obvious project for someone, some group or organization that could encompass it comes instantly to mind: make this the year in which the Victoria Conservatory of Music is provided with adequate space for its needs.

Let's examine some facts and a few statistics concerning our 15-year-old Conservatory.

In the first place, the effective influence of the Conservatory is not confined to one community.Its students come from many parts of the province; represented in a breakdown of the enrolment are 30 commuters from Port Alberni, Saltspring, Port Coquitlam, Pender Island, Union Bay, Campbell River, Duncan, North Vancouver, Chemainus, Williams Lake, Mayne Island, Nanaimo, Courtenay and Fort St.John; while living in Victoria to study at the Conservatory are others from Comox, Prince George, New Westminster, Vancouver, Port Hardy, Lake Cowichan, Chilliwack, Langley, Nanoose Bay, Kelowna, Vanderhoof and Burnaby.

And that isn't all. Throughout the year teachers come from widely spaced B.C. communities to take refresher and master courses at the Conservatory.

Nothing grows so spectacularly unless it is serving a very real need. In its first year it enrolled 60 students and had a budget of $24,000. It has now passed the 1,300 mark and has an annual budget of more than half a million dollars.

The Conservatory provides a complete education for the aspiring professional musican, for children who will enjoy the pleasure of music throughout their lives and for adults who wish only to know music better.

Its teacher training program in piano, voice and strings is the only one in Canada outside Toronto's Royal Conservatory. It also provides a senior professional training program for Camosun College, concentrating on training instrumental teachers, orchestral and ensemble players and soloists.

Glancing through even a partial list of Conservatory students who are now either professional musicians or in the process of studying and winning major awards abroad, is impressive. Pianist Linn Hendry, prize winner and gold medalist, is absorbed in a busy professional career in England; violinist Trudi Conrad is performing professionally and studying in Europe; violinist David Sabey is a member of the Marseilles Opera Orchestra; pianist Lawrence Brown is teaching in Toronto; cellist George Kiraly is teaching in Vernon and Ian Franklin is principal oboe with the Regina Symphony.

There are dozens more with careers blossoming before them. But equally important is the work of the Conservatory with the hundreds of young students from pre-schoolers up who throng the rooms of Craigdarroch Castle every day. A staggering total of 1,797 lessons are given each week.

But with all this, principal and vice principal Robin and Winifred Wood and their faculty chiefs entertain thoughts of expansion and curriculum additions: "We need more senior teachers," says Winifred, "but we have no studio space to offer them."

There is no lack of appreciation for the City of Victoria's generosity in making Craigdarroch Castle available to the Conservatory for the past several years. "I don't know where we would have turned without the city's help," says a spokesman. "We've appreciated being here ... we've simply outgrown it."

What a ready-made and unrivalled provincial project for this particular year the problem presents.

And whatever the final disposition of the Conservatory versus the St. Ann's Academy site, can anyone imagine what would be more welcomed by the Sisters of St.Ann, who were celebrated in years gone by for their fine music tuition, than an institution dedicated to the enriching of young lives through music?

Blessed by Pope

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II looked shocked when a man jumped the fence in the Vatican audience hall and ran toward the pontiff's small throne. Witnesses said the man knelt and asked the Pope for his blessing. The Pope smiled and blessed the man before security guards took him away Wednesday.

Kaleidoscope 'Back Home'

Victoria's professional children's theatre, Kaleidoscope, has an enviable reputation, not only Canada-wide but internationally. Invitations have been received for European and other performances but at present the company directors feel Kaleidoscope's responsibility is primarily to British Columbia audiences.

Kaleidoscope heretofore has spent much of its season on tour, visiting schools throughout the province and has been only rarely seen by general Victoria audiences. However, in acknowledgement of the UNICEF Year of the Child, Kaleidoscope will spend the next few weeks in and around the city, performing its two current plays for young people and their parents.

These plays are Digs, a story in mime, song and movement with generous dollops of humor. It's about the kinds of homes human beings have created through the ages; and Sumidagawa, which is a Japanese word meaning a journey along a river. It's a story about a Japanese mother whose child is kidnapped. The piece is an adaptation by artistic director Liz Gorrie of a Japanese 'No' play.

Performances began Thursday at the Garth Homer Centre on Vernon Avenue. From Sunday through Wednesday they will be seen at Newcombe Auditorium in the Provincial Museum; Thursday and Friday the company will be back at the Garth Homer Centre. Starting time for all performances, which are sponsored in part by CFAX Radio, is 7:30 p.m.

Gorrie, recently returned from a successful trip to Israel where she had been invited to produce her adaptation of The Snow Goose, says she realizes that too few people in Victoria are familiar with the work of Kaleidoscope because of the theatre's commitment to touring the province's schools.

Performance of the two pieces takes about an hour and a half, so the children are not kept out too late. Also, while there will be a $3 admission charge for the adults, all child admissions are free."

Other performances of the two plays include a series at Open Space, 510 Government, Feb.27 to March 3. From March 19 through 21 Sumidagawa will be seen at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria in conjunction with the Gallery's exhibition of Mingei, the folk art of Japan.

Looking further ahead, Kaleidoscope will once again combine with Victoria Symphony in mid-April. Gorrie says the theme will be the seasons and the performances will take place in First United Church hall, where the Symphony rehearses.

Amity Singers Join Symphony

A notable and popular Victoria ensemble, the Amity Singers, will occupy the guest spot at the next Victoria Symphony subscription pair of concerts, scheduled for Sunday and Monday at University Centre Auditorium. On the podium for the pair will be the last of the candidate guest conductors, Brian Law.

Law is currently musical director of the Ottawa Symphony as well as having an outstanding reputation as a choral conductor and organist. He came to Canada from his native England in 1965 to take up the post of organist and choirmaster at St.Matthew's Anglican Church in Ottawa. Among his various degrees is an Associateship of the Royal School of Church Music, an honorary degree conferred on past students who have "distinguished themselves in their chosen field of church music."

While a skilled organist and harpsichordist, it is Law's talent as a choirmaster that has so far marked him as extraordinary. During his 11 years in Ottawa, Law has developed and polished three groups to high levels of achievement; among them the Cantata Singers, an ensemble which has become the resident choir of the National Arts Centre.

The conductor became music director of the Ottawa Symphony Orchestra (formerly the Ottawa Civic Symphony) in 1975. He is also conductor of Thirteen Strings, a newly formed string ensemble which performs music of the baroque era.

Amity Singers has progressed under several musical directors, notably Rodney Webster, George Corwin and Timothy Vernon, to its present status under the noted Canadian conductor, Jon Washburn. What has evolved out of the gifted direction, hard work and a steadfast standard is a semi-professional ensemble of trained singers which has earned a reputation as one of the top chamber choirs in Canada.

Partially funded by Canada Council, the government of B.C. through the B.C. Cultural Fund and Westen Canada Lottery Foundation, and the Leon and Thea Koerner Foundation, Amity's last season saw the choir give 10 performances in Victoria as well as filling out-of-town engagements in six Vancouver Island communities.

LAW

In performing Cantate pour une Joie by Canadian composer Pierre Mercure, with Law and the orchestra, Amity will have soprano Karen Smith as soloist. Ms. Smith has appeared in major roles with the Vancouver Island Opera Society's productions of Menotti's Amahl and the Night Visitors, and Mozart's Marriage of Figaro, and in concert versions of Orpheus and Eurydice and Dido and Aeneas.

She has also been a soloist in various oratorio performances with the Amity Singers, University of Victoria, Victoria Choral Society and at the David Toews Memorial Festival of Sacred Music in Saskatoon. She has appeared frequently in recital under a variety of auspices.

Brian Law will conduct two major orchestral works: Brahms' Variations on a Theme by Haydn, and Symphony No.5 in E minor by Tchaikovsky.

The concerts begin at 2:30 p.m. Sunday and 8 p.m. Monday.

Tears to Melt An Icy Heart

Two Movies Reviewed by LORRAINE LOCHERTY

Mix the theme from Rocky, a scene straight out of the Miracle Worker, traces of Disney and lots of great ice skating and what have you got? A winner of a movie called Ice Castles.

Even though the movie, about a girl who makes Sly Stallone's struggle to become a champion seem like a stroll in the park, is obviously contrived to wring emotions from its audience, it succeeds despite the blatant conniving of director-screenwriter Donald Wrye and author Gary Baim. The overworked story of an underdog fighting overwhelming odds to achieve greatness is easier to accept because of good performances by some old pros and by newcomer Lynn-Holly Johnson.

Johnson, a featured skater with Ice Capades, is surprisingly good in her first screen role as the young figure skater, Lexie. As well as great skating, Johnson manages to bring a convincing awkwardness and vulnerability to her part as the small-town girl with a big talent. She makes a hokey plot believable.

Lexie has no formal figures training, but is such a bundle of raw talent that sponsors backing the nation's top young skaters agree to accept her as an Olympic hopeful. Lexie's rapid ascent is marked by a cover story in Sports Illustrated and a television documentary. But stardom comes too rapidly. She falls while attempting a triple axel, and a blood clot on the brain causes blindness.

Adding a good solid base to the movie are Tom Skerritt (The Turning Point) as Lexie's reluctant father and the wonderful Colleen Dewhurst as the crusty old skating coach who runs a skating rink behind a broken down bowling alley in a rural Ohio town. Also creditable is Jennifer Warren as a national coach who spots Lexie's talent and starts to groom her as a world star.

The strength of the cast almost overcomes the inept performance of top-billed Robby Benson (One on One). Benson, an inept actor who mumbles as though his mouth is wadded with tissue paper, brings a whiney self-indulgence to his role as Lexie's hockey-player boyfriend. Lexie's lack of training and the tragic accident that causes her blindness are two strikes against her; Benson is the third.

Almost half the story is dedicated to Lexie's slow and painful comeback, and includes an attic scene between Lexie and Dewhurst that recalls The Miracle Worker. The comeback road is bumpy, but Lexie is eventually triumphant. At this point the movie becomes a little hard to take. Wrye pushes his luck and the movie's tenuous believability with a too-perfect ending.

Ingrid Bergman and Liv Ullmann in Autumn Sonata

Torments of the Family

Ingmar Bergman's Autumn Sonata is so intense it's almost unbearable. This exploration of the love-hate relationship between mother Catherine (Ingrid Bergman) and daughter Eva (Liv Ullmann) probes the core of two very different women both starved of human contact.

It is a painful and exhausting experience for the audience as well as the principals, who are on the screen almost the entire length of the movie and subjected to some scrutinizing closeups by photographer Sven Nykvist. This knock-down, drag-out confrontation forces us to uncomfortably examine our own often less than perfect family relationships.

Catherine is a concert pianist who lives in the sophisticated, jet-set whirl of high society. She is also an empty shell of a woman incapable of expressing love. Catherine has pushed her children away from her out of guilt, fear and helplessness, and concentrated on her career.

After a seven-year absence, and the death of her lover, she decides to pay a visist to Eva, who lives in the Norwegian countryside. Eva by this time has married a pastor, conceived and lost a child and invited her invalid sister Helena to live with her. Eva is played by Ullmann as a plump, mousy woman who almost visibly cringes from human contact and is pathetically eager to please. Ullmann's Eva is a shy, trembling creature. Bergman's Catherine by contrast is superficial charm and glitter — but the polished exterior hides a troubled soul.

Catherine is shocked to find Helena, the daughter she abandoned to a nursing home so many years ago, now living with Eva, and that her condition has worsened. She is repulsed by Helena's advanced state of physical deterioration but afraid to admit her feelings. Nervously she paces her room, chain—smoking and planning her escape.

Catherine's exit is hastened when Eva finds enough courage in a bottle of wine to confess intense hatred toward her mother for making her feel inferior. The ensuing scene is one of tormented confession as Eva goes back over her frustrated and loveless childhood while Catherine registers shock and dismay. Eva accuses her love-starved mother of deliberately destroying her children's capability to love. "Is it true mother? Is the tragedy of the daughter the mother's triumph?. Is the daughter's grief the mother's secret pleasure?"

During this agonizing dialogue the camera rarely strays from the two women's faces as they wrench out their feelings. There is nowhere to hide as Bergman and Ullmann strip their emotions bare.

Only actresses of their calibre and sensitivity could manage the incredible responsibility of such prolonged one-on-one combat. They both achieve finely honed performances that make the film an extremely moving experience.

Oscar Wilde Show Returns to the Belfry

In 1975 a one-man theatre piece — a portrait entitled Oscar Remembered — was premiered at the Stratford Festival. It starred a hypnotic young actor named Maxim Mazumdar and quickly became a celebrated international highlight of the Festival.

Subsequently the show won several awards and established Mazumdar as a unique and brilliant force in Canadian theatre. In a cross-Canada tour the actor-writer brought Oscar Remembered to Victoria two years ago, presenting it at The Belfry Theatre where it became the talk of this city's theatre-going audiences. Critical and audience acclaim has continued to greet the show wherever it has been performed and now, on the eve of a London and New York tour, The Belfry is bringing Oscar Remembered back for five performances, Tuesday through Saturday.

Oscar Remembered is a portrait of Oscar Wilde as seen through the eyes of his friend, Lord Alfred Douglas. Going to original sources wherever possible, Mazumdar has compiled a touching but unsentimental evocation of the renowned poet-playwright who authored such enduring delights as The Importance of Being Earnest, Lady Windermere's Fan and The Ballad of Reading Gaol. A tour-de-force conceived and portrayed by Mazumdar, it is directed by the famous Stratford and actor, William Hutt.

It depicts a light-hearted Wilde, the source of great enjoyment to others, a warm and generous person whose sin was to live for pleasure and the freedom to dispose his affections where they fell naturally. It was too much for a censorious, self-righteous and hypocritical Edwardian society and led to the imprisonment and ruin of a notable genius.

Tribute to the genius of Wilde has been winnowed from the letters of Lord Alfred, as well as Wilde's own letters, plays and poems.

Mazumdar has received world-wide acclaim as a mono-dramatist. At age 25 he is regarded by many critics as Canada's finest young actor. His career began in Bombay where at 13 he made his debut as Mio in Maxwell Anderson's Winterset. He is also a singer of considerable ability and has sung leading roles in Stop the World and Man of La Mancha.

Two of Canada's leading commentators have called Oscar Remembered "a rare achievement" and "gripping and ultimately poignant".

Tickets for the performance are available at The Belfry, 1291 Gladstone, McPherson Playhouse box-office and University Ticket Centre.

Touring Shows For Kids

Supershow — "The Greatest Little Travelling Show for Young People" — has been announced by the Touring Office of Canada Council as a celebration of the Year of the Child.

It will include 18 professional theatre, dance and music companies with representation from nearly every province. It will form touring "packages" that will travel from coast to coast, including the Yukon and Northwest Territories. There will be readings by major Canadian authors as well as displays of children's books. And it will all begin in Victoria on May 1.

Supershow artists have been selected by a panel of specialists to represent the full spectrum of the performing arts. This special entertainment for children of all ages will be produced and co-ordinated by the Touring Office with extensive co-operation of provincial and municipal governments and local sponsors.

Representing B.C. will be Victoria's Kaleidoscope Theatre and Vancouver's Green Thumb Players and Anna Wyman Dancers. The Royal Winnipeg Ballet, Canadian Brass, Puppetmongers Powell, Quebec clog dancer and harmonica artist Alain Lamontagne, the Mummer's Troupe Punch and Judy Show from Newfoundland, and Ontario's folk singer, Raffi, are among the artists and groups chosen, not all of whom, of course, will be seen everywhere.

Victoria, for instance, will be host to Lamontagne, the Mummer's Troupe, Ontario's renowned mime company, Theatre Beyond Words, and Puppetmongers. From a study of the itinerary it becomes obvious that all efforts have been made to turn the country about and let East meet West and West, East.

Crime Didn't Pay

LIMA (Reuter) — Six gunmen who used a plane to land on a farm in northern Peru and steal $1,000 from the workers didn't do their addition very well, police said Thursday. The cost of hiring the plane and buying fuel was considerably higher than the loot.

Summer Theatre Festival

Plans have been completed this week that will result in the McPherson Playhouse becoming a seven-day, six-week festival theatre next summer. McPherson executive director John Dyck announced today the formation of the McPherson Foundation Players, a house group that will perform a comedy and a musical in repertory throughout July and August.

The musical will be the infectious and lively I Do, I Do, which is based on the popular comedy, The Fourposter. The play will be a remake of the Victoria Actors Association's greatest success, the English farce, Move Over Mrs. Markham. Casts for both productions are already 90 per cent confirmed and all performers are being placed under contract.

The artistic director in both instances is Allan M. Purdy, who recently retired from his position as president of the McPherson Foundation, the theatre's management group which he organized and has steered for the past three years.

Musical director for I Do, I Do, will be former Victorian and now professional Toronto musician, Norman Abbott. Abbott, who is a versatile musician, playing piano, cello and organ, will be joined by his sister, Jocelyn, a former star student of Robin Wood who is now studying at the Royal Academy in London. Jocelyn was recently awarded a Commonwealth Scholarship which provides all her tuition fees and living expenses.

Norman and Jocelyn will form a duo piano accompaniment for the musical.

The two shows will run in full rep, from Wednesday through Saturday with one complete week of performances at the end of August. Full details of the casts are not yet available but it is understood that among those confirmed are Colin Skinner and Marge Bridgman.

The Sunday-through Tuesday spot will be occupied by the Victoria International Festival great artist series concerts, details of which will shortly be announced.

Author Gives Reading at UVic

A former writer-in-residence at University of Victoria, Ken Mitchell, will give a free public reading Wednesday in UVic's Clearihue A106 at 12:30 p.m.

Saskatchewan's Mitchell is a novelist, playwright and poet. He is the creator of the widely acclaimed country opera, Cruel Tears, described as one of the most original and inventive theatre pieces ever staged in Canada. He is also the author of a novel, Wandering Rafferty; a collection of stories entitled Everybody Gets Something Here, and the editor of Horizon: An Anthology of Prairie Literature.

AROUND THE GALLERIES

A collection of photographs, drawings, etchings and lithographs from the 1978 and 1979 editions of From an Island Review go on view at the University of Victoria Maltwood Art Museum and Gallery Monday.

The publication is a collective review of artists and writers and is published annuallly by the Creative Writing department at UVic.

The exhibit features the work of 29 young artists of Vancouver Island. The contributors include creative writing or fine arts students at UVic, local artists and creative writing graduates. More than 50 pieces of art comprising a wide range of themes are on show.

The exhibit continues until March 2. The gallery is open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday to Friday.

Currently and through mid-March at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria there are four main exhibits. Great interest is being shown in Nationalism in Canadian Art, a show which traces the development of Canadian art from its European roots to the present.

Introduction to Contemporary Art presents works by American artists of the last 15 years, including sculpture, drawings and prints. Most of the works are on loan from the Vancouver Art Gallery, the remainder being from the Victoria Gallery's own collection and private lenders.

Chinese paintings by Johnson Su-Sing Chow, a Fellow of the China Academia of the Republic of China, and Mingei: Folk Art of Japan, a colorful showing of textiles, peasant and actors' costumes, lacquer and wooden utensils and pottery are popular with gallery visitors.

Viewers can now follow or precede their prowl around the rooms with a light lunch or tea in the old world atmosphere of the Spencer mansion where the new Gallery Cafe is open from 10:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Tuesday to Saturday and from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Sundays.

At the Emily Carr Centre, 205 Government, the uniquely individual works of painter Toby Nilsson will go on view Monday with an official opening from 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. The exhibition will continue through March 2.

Busy Music Week At UVic

Musically speaking it's one of this session's busiest weeks at the University of Victoria starting Wednesday. On that evening UVic's Little Orchestra conducted by George Corwin will perform one of Mozart's purest works, the Symphony No.40 in G minor.

Also on the program will be dance movements from the ballet, Petit Riens and Mozart's Sinfonia Concertante. In the latter work, Paul Kling, violin, and Jaroslav Karlovsky, viola, are featured.

This performance will take place in the University Centre Auditorium at 8 p.m. Tickets are available at the University box-office and Hillside Mall ticket centre.

Percussion that includes some rare instruments stars in a concert in the Music Building recital hall on Thursday. Tibetan prayer stones, Japanese temple bells and an African thumb piano are prominent instruments in George Crumb's Makrokosomos No.3: Music for a Summer Evening.

Participating in the presentation of the contemporary piece for two amplified pianos and percussion include Scott Eddlemon, principal timpanist with the Victoria Symphony and a faculty member of UVic's School of Music, and pianists Kathleen Solose and Edward Norman, also of the School of Music.

The guest artist will bje John Rudolph, principal percussionist with the Vancouver Symphony. The program, which begins at 8 p.m., will also include Bartok's Sonata for Two Pianos and Percussion.

Uvic's Sonic Lab performs three compositions in a free public concert in the recital hall Friday. Anton Webern's 20th century classic, Konzert Op.24, will be a featured work. It is scored for nine instruments and is rarely performed.

John Anthony Celona's composition Player Piano II, will receive a premiere performance on the same program. Celona is a resident composer on the music faculty.

As a final work, a composition merging the text of the Ordinary of the Roman liturgy and musical ideas of the latter 20th century will be performed. Mass is by graduate student David MacIntyre. It is scored for 12 instrumentalists and four singers. Well known Victoria soprano Karen Smith is featured in this premiere performance.

Dog Saves Man

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A dog led its owner to an alley where Alvin Paynes was suffocating, his hands bound behind his back with a coat hanger and a glove stuffed down his throat, police said. The owner, who was not identified, called police, who revived Paynes.

Drama Festival

The Greater Victoria High School Drama Festival begins Tuesday and will continue through March 2. A series of plays will be presented at various secondary schools in the city during the two-week period.

Of particular interest to the public will be the Showcase presentation on March 1 and 2 at Victoria High. On those two nights the best plays of the festival will be performed and awards will be presented. Also, one of the six plays chosen by adjudicator Peter Gordon will be selected to go to the provincial finals.

Curtain time is 8 p.m.

Noon-Hour Programs

Free noon events at McPherson Playhouse next week include a violin recital by Victoria Symphony player Stephen Calder on Tuesday, and continuation of the Quebec series of films Wednesday. On Thursday, a dramatic program entitled Story Theatre and featuring UVic's Jim Leard and theatre students will be presented.

The programs begin at 12:15. Box lunches are available in the foyer at nominal cost.

Taillibert Roof Collapses

PARIS (CP) — Architect Roger Taillibert said Friday the collapse of a small section of roofing in a stadium he designed here would not be repeated in his other major work, Montreal's Olympic Stadium which has cost more than $600 million.

"It couldn't take place in Montreal," Taillibert said in an interview. "The two structures aren't the same."

"You (in Montreal) are safe," he added, "and I'm not worried."

The go-ahead was given Friday for a key rugby match today between France and Wales at the 50,000-seat stadium but only after a special committee of architects and engineers had judged the structure safe, on completion of some urgent repairs.

On Tuesday, a small section of the metal roof fell into the empty stands below as a result of shifts in expansion joints at one corner of the Parc des Princes stadium.

Taillibert said the incident was caused by a cold snap in January followed by recent warming weather. France has been experiencing the coldest winter in many years.

In Montreal, the stadium was designed for the rigors of the Canadian climate and there was no cause for concern, he added.

The architect also said there had a complete lack of surveillance at the Parc des Princes in the eight years since completion, while in Montreal the Olympic Stadium was being constantly maintained.

It was a visit to the Parc des Princes stadium in 1971, as construction was being completed, which prompted Mayor Jean Drapeau to ask Taillibert to design the Olympic Stadium in Montreal.

Both projects use complex construction techniques involving giant concrete ribs pre-stressed with steel cables.

Mayor Jacques Chirac Friday termed the collapse "a serious incident" which would result in even tighter inspection of the structure by city of Paris engineers. The city owns the stadium.

But when asked whether the architect could be faulted for the problem, Chirac became agitated and waved his arms, refusing to reply.

Taillibert earlier minimized the gravity of the matter, calling it "a minor incident which can be repaired in a few hours."

"Concrete reacts to the weather," he said.

This explanation prompted Bruno Vigoureux, writing in the daily France-Soir to comment:

"In this way, the guilty party is found. It's the fault of a brutal spell of mild weather. It is nevertheless going to be difficult to pursue the responsible party in the courts.

WRONG CURVE - CABBIES

MOSCOW (AP) — More than a dozen Leningrad taxi drivers walked off the job because their biorhythm charts showed it was a "critical" day for them. The drivers got the day off Wednesday on doctors' orders and will still collect their pay. The Soviet news agency Tass, reporting on increasing use of biorhythms to cut accidents among workers, said charts have been made for 5,000 cabbies in Leningrad to judge their physical, emotional and intellectual capabilities during 23-, 28- and 33-day cycles.

Rhodesia Hits in Revenge

SALISBURY (AP) — Rhodesian jets attacked black guerrilla bases in southern Zambia shortly after dawn today, the Rhodesian military command announced.

The air raids followed Monday's downing of an Air Rhodesia civilian airliner near the Zambian border in which all 59 persons aboard were killed.

Black guerrillas operating out of Zambia claimed responsibility for shooting down the airliner, the worst aviation disaster in Rhodesian history.

The screech of Rhodesian jets returning from the raid drowned out a memorial service at a police chapel for some of the victims of Monday's crash. The service was held up as mourners peered out windows at the aircraft.

"We knew then that retribution was being exacted," a relative of one of the victims said. "It made us much less sorrowful."

The four-sentence military communique said Rhodesian jets carried out "a number of strikes" against bases belonging to the Zimbabwe African Peoples Union around Livingstone, the Zambian community which borders Victoria Falls on Rhodesia's northwest border. There was no immediate word on Zambian casualties.

It said all its aircraft returned to Rhodesia safely.

"Recent intelligence showed that a buildup of terrorists was taking place preparatory to infiltrating into Rhodesia," the communique said.

ZAPU is headed by Joshua Nkomo, who, together with Mozambique-based Robert Mugabe, heads the Patriotic Front guerrilla alliance. They are in a six-year-old guerrilla war aimed at toppling the Salisbury government.

Today's raid and the downing of the airliner Monday tends to dampen chances of imminent peace talks between the guerrilla leaders and the transition government as proposed by Britain.

Mardi Gras Events Curbed

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — National Guardsmen patrolled New Orleans today after police went on strike, prompting the mayor to cancel seven carnival parades and throwing a pall over the entire Mardi Gras season.

In more than 120 years, the festival has been cancelled just seven times — twice because of epidemics, five times for war.

The Teamster-affiliated police union went on strike Friday night — for the second time in a week — to back demands that the city submit contract issues to binding arbitration.

Mayor Ernest Morial said the substitute police force would be increased later today to more than 1,100 guardsmen and state police.

Morial cancelled elaborate carnival parades for today, Sunday and Monday. Two of nine parades affected changed routes to remain in suburban territory, out of the strike zone.

"Mardi Gras this year might be killed by the actions of outsiders who have come into our city without any real understanding of our city, our citizens or our system of government," Morial told a news conference.

He was referring to the team of negotiators flown in by the Teamsters Union for the Police Association of Louisiana, Teamsters Local 253. It claims 1,200 of the 1,514 commissioned officers on the force as members.

Vincent Bruno, local president, said the talks were under the direction of local negotiators and that he would check with federal mediators about possible resumption of negotiations.

A spokesman at police headquarters said 38 patrol cars were out during the night in this city of 600,000, each manned by two state troopers and one city policeman. Normally, there would be 55 cars.

A message to parents

WHY SHOULD YOUR CHILD BE A TIMES CARRIER?

The living is pretty good these days. Likely you're making enough money to GIVE the children a nice allowance. So, why should your son or daughter manage a Times route?

Most any educator or business person will tell you why in three simple words . . . IT BUILDS CHARACTER . . . something that's lacking in lots of young people these days.

In many cases, the young person who grows up getting the weekly "handout" from dad or mom never realizes the value of money or the efforts required to make it and manage it!

Times carriers quickly learn valuable lessons that stick. Through route management, carriers learn responsibility and builds self-confidence at an early age and have an advantage over other young people that no amount of money can buy.

If you're still wondering if your son or daughter would benefit from a Times route, phone our Circulation Department at 382-3131 or write for details. One of our District Representatives will be glad to discuss route work with you.

And too, we think you'll find that our District Representatives are the kind of people you'll like to have your son or daughter associated with.

Parents . . . let us hear from you. Talk to us today!

Logging 'A Misuse' Of Bowron'

The proposal to log fallen timber in Bowron Lakes provincial park would be a misuse of a famous park, the National and Provinical Parks Association of Canada said Friday.

The park, well known for its unique chain of lakes, is located about 20 miles east of the historic mining town of Barkerville.

The proposal to log in the park was made by the Quesnel Chamber of Commerce to Premier Bill Bennett during a visit to the city. The matter was referred to Parks Minister James Chabot.

In condemning the proposal, the association's executive committee in a telex to the minister warned logging would set a precedent for all other provincial parks.

It also noted the park has a Class A designation under which resource extraction, including logging, is not permitted.

Meanwhile, a parks employee in a letter to Chabot has pointed out a logging road would have to be constructed right through a famous portage to Keebee Lake - the start of the Bowran Lakes chain.

"Just think how excited the tourists will be when the find themselves dodging logging trucks," he wrote.

Chabot has responded to previous criticism of the proposed logging of the 6,000 acre blowdown by saying logging would enhance the area.

On another logging issue, the Sierra Club of Western Canada wants the government to delay its logging plans for the Akamina-Kishenina valley until a study on its effects on the grizzly bear population in the area is undertaken.

The wooded valley in southwestern B.C. and adjacent to a U. S. national park, was set aside as a recreational area in the 1950's. The government now wants to log it on the grounds the trees are under attack by an insect.

The Sierra request follows a report by Charles Jonkel, internationally known for his work on bears, that a study of the grizzly population would take at least five years.

Jonkel was retained by the fish and wildlife branch to study grizzly habitat in the Akamina.

60-Day 'Jolt' For Teen Burglar

County court Judge E.J.C. Stewart Friday rejected probation for a 19-year-old man charged with burglary.

"I think this young man needs a bit of a jolt," he told Crown counsel Peter Birkett and defence lawyer Brian MacKenzie as he sentenced Brian John David Birks to 60 days in jail for breaking and entering with intent to steal at Greater Victoria Savings Credit Union, 3053 Shelbourne, last April 30.

MacKenzie had suggested a suspended sentence and $232 compensation to the credit union for a broken window, and Birkett, who had applied for the compensation order, said he agreed.

"I'm not so sure," the judge said.

He noted two previous convictions for possession of a narcotic, one for public mischief and one for theft under $200 value.

FIREMEN TO WORK LATE

Firemen will work past midnight at Victoria airport if notified of late flights although the overtime issue is still not resolved, a union spokesman said Friday.

John Hart, regional representative of the Public Service Alliance of Canada, said firemen will work overtime to ensure the safety of passengers while discussions continue with Transport Canada.

B.C. Tel Workers Seek Provincial Takeover

The Telecommunications Workers Union Friday urged the provincial government to assume control of the B.C. Telephone Co. as confirmation of its position that control of B.C. companies should remain in the province.

TWU president Bob Donnelly said in a new release the people of B.C. should be concerned that recent corporate moves by the company mean more control over a supposedly B.C. corporation by a U.S. multinational company.

He was commenting on B.C. Tel's announcement earlier this week that it was going to purchase GTE Automatic Electric (Canada) Ltd. and GTE Lenkurt Electric (Canada) Ltd. from B.C. Tel's parent company General Telephone and Electronics Corp. of Stanford, Conn.

In exchange for its subsidiaries, General Telephone's percentage of B.C. Tel shares would increase to 55 per cent from 50.1 per cent.

"I an skeptical of B.C. Tel statements that this move is going to benefit B.C.," Donnelly said.

"The $47 million in B.C. Tel shares that will be used to purchase these two companies creates in fact more foreign control over this company."

Donnelly said it is the union's understanding that Canadian tax law provides that a Canadian corporation is not taxed for dividends received from another corporation.

"B.C. Tel thus will not be taxed for profits received from its proposed subsidiaries Lenkurt and Automatic Electric.

"Gentel continues to wield total corporate control over the extended company and gains, in the process, even greater tax advantage.

"As a union we are concerned that the provincial government continues to accept the increased foreign control over what should be a utility owned and operated by the people of B.C."

B and B Stands for Bed and Breakfast

B and B, what's that?

To a bartender, it's a drink. To a traveler, it's a way of spending the night in England, Scotland or Wales, which can be great fun, and certainly beats the price of many hotels! B and B stands for "bed and breakfast".

In these days of penny-wise transportation to Britain via ABC or CCF, a lot of people are looking for bargain accommodation to complement these low trans-Atlantic fares.

B and B offers a night's accommodation and full British breakfast for as little as $12-$15. With the evening meal, it can run to $17-$21 a night.

A countryside network of accommodation reservation services in Britain called "Book A Bed Ahead" can be used to make accommodation arrangements a day in advance. This service is operated by the English, Wales and Scottish Tourist Boards and many of their Tourist Information Centres offer this convenient way of finding an inexpensive room for the night. Most British towns have a Tourist Information Centre (TIC) but only those displaying a bed symbol on the official TIC name-plate are able to perform this function. A small charge is made for this reservation service and this amount will vary according to location.

Let's say one morning you decide to make a day trip by train from London to Oxford. While in Oxford you decide you want to spend the night there and travel on the next day to visit a village in the Cotswolds. What's more, you are travelling on a budget and have made no advance reservations for accommodation in Oxford or in the Cotswolds for that matter. Well, have no fear, say the people at the British Tourist Authority. You need only go to the local Tourist Information Centre in Oxford in order to locate and book a room not only in the Oxford area for one night but also to "book a bed ahead" for the next stop on your journey.

So the following day, when you arrive at your destination in the Cotswolds, you already have a place to stay. Simplicity itself.

In a nutshell, it's a way of staying in a British private home with a family. B and B is simply a system by which private residents rent out an unfilled bedroom or two. This is a marvellous way of meeting British people on their "home" ground, so to speak and provides the possibility of making many new friends.

You don't need to drive a car to go the B and B route. Although most Canadians like to tour Britain in a rental car, it is not necessary to drive to enjoy a B and B holiday. You can travel by bus with a bargain "Coachmaster" pass or by British Rail with a BritRail pass. Or buy your tickets as you go.

If you want to "play it by ear", you can always find your own B and B accommodation as you tour — the local Post Office or pub is usually a good source of information. However, many Britain-bound visitors still want to do some planning in advance and there are several useful books which can help.

The British Automobile Association offers the AA Guide to Guesthouses, Farms and Inns (recommended retail price: $6.75). Their B and B listing is 108 pages long and the premises listed are regularly inspected for cleanliness and comfort.

The "Where to Stay" books for various parts of Britain issued by the Wales, Scottish and English Tourist Boards list many bed and breakfast and guesthouse locations. These are priced as follows:

- Where to Stay in Scotland: B and B ($1.60);
- Where to Stay in Wales ($1.95);
- Where to Stay — English regions ($1.75, each region).

These books are available in Canada from any Classics or W. H. Smith bookstore coast-to-coast, or by mail from: Pendragon Books Ltd., 2525 Dunwin Drive, Mississauga, Ontario L5L 1R9; or British Travel Books, P.O. Box 903, Station A, Vancouver, B.C. V6C 2N7.

Add 50 cents per item to cover postage and handling and allow 2-4 weeks for delivery.

Veterans Tour Set

A three-week tour to England and the Continent has been arranged for Vancouver Island residents who want to visit places of special interest to former members of the armed forces.

It leaves Victoria May 16 by Air Canada and includes visits to London, Paris, Brussels, and Amsterdam, as well as guided tours at Caen, Arras, Vimy Ridge, and Nijmegen. It also includes a canal cruise and a visit to the famous Rijksmuseum in Amsterdam.

The tour was arranged by Feathersone Travel Ltd. of Victoria, in response to requests from some veterans who thought that it would be more fun to travel in a group than individually to those historic landmarks.

The trip was organized by Danny Miller, a well known Victoria travel consultant, who is a member of the Royal Canadian Legion, and who was a member of Victoria's Canadian Scottish Regiment in the early 1940's.

The package tour, arranged by Miller in co-operation with Air Canada and Global Tours Company in London, includes air fair, transfers, hotel accommodations, tours, and a number of meals. The cost is $1,780 for each person.

Although the tour is expected to attract mainly veterans, their families and friends, anyone who is interested can join if space is available.

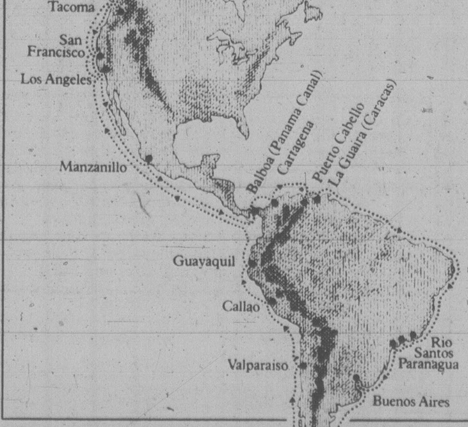
OUR CRUISELINERS EACH CARRY ONLY 100 PASSENGERS AROUND SOUTH AMERICA.
WHY SETTLE FOR MORE?



If you want a cruise where you won't get lost in the crowd, come aboard a Delta Line Cruiseliner. Twenty-two times a year our luxurious Cruiseliners carry just 100 pampered passengers and exotic cargoes around South America and prime space is now available on our spring and summer cruises.
100 is the perfect number for a congenial cruise. Every Cruiseliner has a friendly, informal atmosphere where it's easy to get acquainted and impossible to be bored.
What's more, our Cruiseliners offer spacious accommodations, the excitement of traveling on a real working ship, a full social calendar, an international menu and an attentive American crew.
The full cruise lasts approximately 63 days. Along the way you'll sail through the Panama Canal, visit romantic Rio and beautiful Buenos Aires, continue on through the spectacular Strait of Magellan and then up the West Coast of South America.
